Roscommon, now Lords de Freyne, the Frenchs of Rahasane Park, Curgarray, Tyrone, Brecklodge, and others, in addition to that now under notice, which suffered much during the Irish disturbances, having its estate and Castle of Monivae seized, and granted to the Lords Trimleston (the Frenchs getting them "by transplantation," and later, viz., 16 March, 30 CHARLES II., the lands of Cornidus, Derryglassane, Killbegg, &c., still in locus possessionis), who, returning to their ancient seat in Limerick, transferred them by sale back to the former proprietors.

The name French, Frynabe, De Freyne, or De Frignes, pronounced in the Norman tongue de Freen, appears (as is attested) in the third list of WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR's companions, given in Stowe's Chronicle (p. 107). The settlement of the family in Ireland dates from the English invasion, and, like it, took place in the co. Wexford, where the line of Frynabe of Ballintory, has left several descents in the Irish records. The founder in Ireland was,

SIR HUMPHREY DE FREYNE, said in different accounts to have had two and five sons. One of them,

PATRICK FREYNE or FREYNE settled at Ballymacnuck, co. Wexford, and was father, with others, of

WALTER FRENCH, who about 1425 settled in the co. Galway, and m. a dau. and heiress of Athy, another of the fourteen "tribes," and from their issue descend the various families of the name in Galway, Sligo, Mayo, Roscommon, &c. Passing on to

PATRICK FRENCH OF MONIVAE, we find that he died testate about the year 1618, that being the date of his will, and by inquisition held at Loughreagh 30 April, 1631, it was found by the jury that

PATRICK BEOG (the small-statured) FRENCH of Monivae, d. 6 Feb. 1630, possessed of the Castle of Monivae, Carrat-leagh, &c., still held by the family. Patrick Begg was s. by his son, ROBERT FRENCH, of Monivae, who lived in the "evil days" of civil strife, and was deprived of his estate. He married first a dau. of the Browne "tribe," by whom he had no surviving sons; and 2ndly, Evelina Kirwan, also of a "tribe"; whose tombstone remains in the interesting ruins of Abbey Knockmoy, near the celebrated frescoes copied and displayed in the Dublin Exhibition of 1853. The inscription under the arms (impaled Baron et femme, the latter side duly bearing per fesse, in chief the arms of Browne, an eagle displayed, in base those of Kirwan, a chevron between three choughs, as second wife, with the motto, "Laus Deo") is as follows:—

"Pray for the Lady Evelyn French her soule who ordained herself to be interred in this Abbey for her this monument was erected by her children Patrick French and Valentin French, and for a burial place for themselves August the 8th, 1684."

The eldest son,

PATRICK FRENCH, Gent. above-mentioned, of Corendoo, which he had received "by transplantation," obtained with the lady Evelyn, his mother, above-mentioned, who had re-married Sir Oliver French, the lands of Derryglassane, Killbeg, &c., as before said, 16 March, 30 CHARLES II. (died enrolled 18 March, 1678). He was s. by his son,

FULLARTON OF KILMICHAEL.

FULLARTON, JANE-ANNABELLA, of Kilmeal and Whitefarland, isle of Arran, m. 4 July, 1855, her cousin, Menzies-James Bowdon, now Fullarton, Esq., son of the late Robert Bowdon, Esq. of Greenock, and s. to the estates of Kilmeal and Whitefarland, at the decease of her father, the late Major Fullarton, 2 Jan. 1860.

Lineage.—The late MAJOR ARCHIBALD FULLARTON, of Kilmeal and Whitefarland, son of Dr. Louis Fullarton, of Kilmeal, by Susannah Stewart, his wife, represented a very ancient family, which has been in possession of their present estates for nearly five hundred years.

FERGUS FULLARTON, or MACLOY, obtained the lands of Kilmeal for services rendered to ROBERT THE BRUCE while he was in concealment in the Isle of Arran. From this Fergus, the property descended in regular succession to Major Fullarton. It is to the above-named Fergus Fullarton, or Macloy, that Sir Walter Scott makes allusion under the name of Fitzlouis in the Lord of the Isles. And in a note in the first edition of that poem, referring to Fitzlouis, he says, "If tradition be true, this ancient and respectable family must be upwards of seven hundred years standing." Of the Kilmeal family, a scion was Fullarton of Glendernel, one of whom was Bishop of Edinburgh from 1730 to 1737.

The earliest Charter still extant is one from ROBERT III., dated 26 Nov. 1391, for the lands of Strathwhellan; and the first Charter of Kilmeal is by the same monarch, dated 5 Sept. 1409, in the 11th year of his reign. It is merely a confirmation of the lands of Kilmeal, and the office of Coroner of Arran, which are stated to belong to Ferchard de Foulerton, hereditably, and which consequently had been conferred on some one of his ancestors by a previous sovereign, most probably by ROBERT BRUCE. The next charter is by JAMES, King of Scots, in favour of John de Foulerton, dated 4 April, 1427, of the lands of Kilmeal and office of Coroner; and then follows a long succession of charters by ancestors of the ducal house of Hamilton.

The late MAJOR ARCHIBALD FULLARTON was a magistrate and deputy-lieutenant for Buteshire. He m. twice: by his first wife, Jane, dau. of the late Rev. Dr. William Pebles, of Ayr, he had an only child,

JANE-ANNABELLA, now of Kilmeal, the wife of MENZIES-JAMES BOWDON FULLARTON, Esq.

Lineage.—Few families can claim so ancient and unbroken a line of ancestry as the Fullertons of Ayrshire. Their pedigree is authentically traced through six centuries, and, during the whole of that long period, no link is wanting in the chain of descent; and, what is more remarkable, no failure has occurred in the male succession.

Traditionally, it is said, the family is derived from an Anglo-Saxon or Norman origin. This seems at least, not improbable. On the return to Scotland, or first introduction as some will have it, of Walter, son of Alan, ancestor of the High Stewards, from England, about the beginning of the twelfth century, he was accompanied by many of his friends and adherents. Soon after his arrival, Walter obtained a royal grant of the countries of Kyle and Strathgrief (now Renfrewshire), and here, as Chalmers and others affirm, many of his followers obtained from him grants of land, and became resident in the country; and from them have been derived most of the principal families now inhabiting those parts. In accordance then, with tradition, it seems far from improbable that at the period here alluded to, the ancestor of the Fullertons may have so accompanied the progenitor of the High Stewards, and obtained a possession in Kyle.

ALLAN FULLERTON, living in 1240, d. about 1280. He was father of

ADAM FULLERTON, who received a charter of the lands of Fullerton from James, high steward of Scotland, which charter was renewed by ROBERT II in 1371. His son,

REGINALD FULLERTON, of that ilk, living in 1310, was father of

SIR ADAM FULLERTON, of Fullerton, much in the interest of ROBERT II, and the family of Stewart. In 1346, he accompanied the army under DAVID II into England, and was one of those created knights by that monarch before the army crossed the border; he was taken prisoner with King DAVID, at the battle of Durham, 17 Oct., and on the king's release, Sir Adam's eldest son and heir was one of the twenty hostages left in England, until the payment of the king's ransom. By Marjorie his wife, a lady of the Stewart family, Sir Adam had two sons,

JOHN, who was one of the hostages left in England for the King's ransom. He d. v. p., leaving a son, John, who served for some years with the army in Germany, and in 1639, went to France as lieutenant-col. to the Hon. Alexander Erskine, brother to the Earl of Mar. In 1640, LOUIS XIII, King of France, advanced him to the rank of colonel in the French service. Col. Fullerton acquired the estate of Dudwick, co. Aberdeen. He m. and left issue; his descendant, Gen. John Fullerton, of Dudwick, a brave and gallant officer, greatly distinguished himself in the Prussian and Russian service, in the latter of which he attained the rank of general. Lineage.—There are no records known to be in existence of the early history of this family. The first authentic document is a judiciary process in the 15th century, relating to a feud between the laird of Gardyne and the laird of Guthrie, the latter of whom was killed by the former. An account of Forfarshire, written by John Ochterlony, of Gwynd, printed in the Spottiswood Miscellany, and supposed to be compiled somewhere about 1660 or 1670, calls them "Gairdyne of that ilk, a very ancient family, and chief of the name;" previous to that time the castle of Gardyne, and a great part of the barony, had passed out of their hands. The tradition of the family says it had been "wadset," to raise money for the government, in defence of the country. THE GARDYNES, or GARDENS, of that ilk, the GARDYNES of Lawton, and the GARDYNES of Middleton, are all one and the same family.

GIBBS, JOHN, Esq. of The Yews, Sheffield, co. York, and Maze Hill Cottage, St. Leonard's-on-Sea, co. West Yorkshire hussars, by Anne his wife, dau. of Samuel Thorp, Esq. of Banks Hall, co. York, and has issue,

- I. Louisa-Christina-Waldegrave.
- II. Anna-Maria-Scima.

Mr. Gibbs is the author of "A Letter to the Board of Health," printed by order of the House of Commons, and eulogised by the great Humboldt, and of other works. He is a capt. in the Cinque Ports volunteer artillery.

Lineage.—This family of Gibbs claims to be lineally descended from that so long settled in Devonshire. In his essay on English surnames, Lower deduces Gibbs from Gilbert, thus assigning the name a Norman origin—Gilbert (as well as Gildard; see ROLL OF BATTLE ABNEY) being a Norman name; and it appeared, from an ancient roll in the possession of Jenking Gibbes (temp. HENRY VIII.) of the family of Elmerstone, in Kent, a branch of the Gibbes, of Fenton, in Devonshire, that the family had existed in Normandy long prior to the Conquest of England. The name De Guibbes is said to be still found in France, and is deduced, by a learned Swiss clergyman, from an Arabic root; and Dumas, in his travels in the south of France, quotes one of the name as author of an archaeological article in the Journal de Trévoux, 1729.

DANIEL GIBBS, Esq. of Cork, and of Derry, co. Cork, descended, from the family of Gibbes, of Devon, mentions in his will, dated 12 Jan. 1719, and proved 3 Dec. 1724, his relatives, Henry Wallis, Esq. of Driahane, Christopher Knight, sen., his brother-in-law, and his cousin Godfrey. In the records of the corporation of the city of Cork, allusion is made to this Daniel Gibbes as "an ancient freeman." He is likewise mentioned in the following curious passage, extracted from the same records:—"21st June, 1691. Whereas, the corporation is indebted unto Daniel Gibbes, in several sums of money by him lent towards subsisting the army, and an order of council made for raising of the money when Mr. Gibbes shall be drawn on for the same; and whereas Mr. Gibbes is now drawn on, and wants the money, and noe publicke money in banks to answer the same, it is this day ordered that the mayor take money up and pay interest for the same, and give the city seal for security, and pay the money unto Mr. Gibbes towards his discharge, or any other security that shall be demanded, and the city seal to be given them for their security." He had issue, with five daus. (Catherine, wife of John Norcott, Esq. of Ballygarrett; Elizabeth; Judith, d. at an advanced age in 1753, Mary; and Sarah, wife of Joseph franklyn, Esq. of Brittas, near Cork), two sons, viz., John Gibbes, Esq. of Derry, who d. s. p.; and Lineage.—This is one of the most ancient and distinguished families in England.

OSBORNE DE BOLEBEC, a noble Norman, living in the time of Richard I, surnamed Sans Peur, Duke of Normandy, m. Avelina, sister of Gunnora, the 2nd wife of Duke Richard, and, by her, had,

WALTER, who obtained the name of "Giffard," or the Liberal; was created Count of Longueville by Duke Richard II, probably about 1025, and was constituted Earl of the co. of Buckingham. (For the line of this nobleman, see BURKE's Extinct and Dormant Peerage.) OSBORNE.

The 2nd son,

OSBORNE GIFFARDE, 2nd son of Osborne de Bolebec, a noble Norman, by Avelina, his wife, sister of Gunnora, the 2nd wife of Duke Richard of Normandy, contributing together, with his distinguished brother, Walter Giffard, Count of Longueville, to placing England under the yoke of the Norman, had, of course, his portion of the spoil, and the fertile co. of Gloucester was allotted as the locality of his reward. This Osborne d. about the year 1088, and was s. by his son, Salop; and Walter.

Peter Giffard, in his extended and chequered life, saw the entire downfall and the perfect restoration of his family. From the commencement of the great rebellion, he appears to have taken an active and decided part in it, for at an early period we find his estates confiscated, and himself a prisoner. Chillington, so recently receiving a royal guest, became a royal garrison. The estates were sold by the Drury House commissioners; and the members of the family, after fighting in the king's army as long as an army existed, were in prison, in banishment, or in concealment. When the second CHARLES made his ill-advised descent on England, in 1651, several of the Giffards joined him, and fought on the fatal field of Worcester. After his defeat, the king owed his safety, in a great measure, to the guidance of Charles Giffard, a nephew of Peter Giffard, of Chillington, and the fidelity of the Pendrill, the devoted retainers of the Giffards. He d. "full of days," 25 Jan. 1663, and was s. by his son,

THOMAS GIFFARD, Esq. of Chillington, who m. in 1690, Mary, dau. of John Thimelby, Esq. of Irtham, co. Lincoln, but dying, without issue, in 1718, was s. by his kinsman,

PETER GIFFARD, Esq. of Black Ladies (refer to John, 2nd son of Peter, who suffered during the civil wars, and d. in 1663), who thus became of CHILLINGTON, and representative of the family. He m. 1st, Winifred, dau. of Robert Howard, Esq. of Horecross, but by her had no issue. He m. 2ndly, Barbara, dau. of Sir Robert Throckmorton, Bart. of Caughton, and had,

GILLBANKS OF WHITEFIELD HOUSE.

GILLBANKS, JACKSON, Esq. of Whitefield House, co. Cumberland, J.P., b. 5 Nov. 1819; B.A. and LL.B. of St. John's College, Cambridge, a barrister-at-law, patron of the living of Uldale.

Lineage.—This family sprung from the mountain district near Keswick. The name, spelt in old family records "Ghyllbanke," evidently shows their connection with that locality: "'Gill' or 'Ghyll,'" as an author observes, "means a mountain stream confined between steep banks and running rapidly." Several generations ago, the Gillbanks held considerable property about the Vale of St. John and Threlkeld. There is still the small ancient hamlet of Gillbank in that part where they are said to have resided, but the bulk of the property having devolved upon an heiress, who married, it passed into other hands, and the family were much dispersed. One branch then settled in the east of Cumberland, where there have been a succession of clergymen of the name (under the patronage of the Howards) for many generations. The late Rev. G. Gillbanks held the living of Lanercost Priory for nearly sixty years. A distant branch is also represented by Thomas Gillbanks, Esq. of Culgaith; another branch, of which we now treat, settled at Southwaite Close, near Ireby, which has now been in their possession about two hundred years.

JOSEPH GILLBANKS, Esq., the younger son of Joseph Gillbanks, of the above place, who m. Miss Elizabeth

Sheffield, was b. 28 Jan. 1780. He went to Jamaica in 1800, and having amassed a large fortune, as a merchant there, returned, in 1814, to England, when he purchased the Whitefield House, Orthwaite Hall, Halciff Hall and other estates in the co. of Cumberland, which the present owner has since much improved and beautified. He m. 7 Jan. 1819, Mary, eldest dau. of Ralph Jackson, Esq. of Normanby-in-Cleveland, Yorkshire, and niece of Colonel Jackson, of St. Dorothy, Jamaica, and of the Hon. R. Jackson, lord chief justice of that island, which family has held large possessions there for many generations. This lady, by the sudden death of her cousin, W.-Thomas Jackson (son of Col. Jackson, of Jamaica), has succeeded to the great bulk of that gentleman's property, and by this lady, who survives him, Mr. Gillbanks had issue one son and two daus, viz.,

GILLMAN OF OAKMOUNT.

GILLMAN, JAMES-HERBERT, Esq. of Oakmount, co. Cork, b. 22 Sept. 1845.

Lineage.—The Gillmans of Ireland are stated, in an old family tradition, to be descended from a Christian knight of that name, who, during the crusades, was engaged in single combat with a Saracen, whose right leg he cut off with a sabre cut. This exploit is commemorated in the crest of arms; and the crest, a griffin's head, with a bear's paw in its mouth, being emblematic of strength, together with the motto "Not by word, but by deed," tend to confirm the legend. The first who settled in Ireland are stated to have been two officers in King WILLIAM's army, 1690, one of whom survived, and received a grant of land. i. Frances-Agnes.

Major Goddard is patron of the living of Cliffe Pypard, the gift of the rectory and vicarage having belonged to his family ever since it was first alienated from the Monastery of Lacock, in the time of King HENRY VIII.

Lineage.—The family of Goddard, of Wilts, or Godard, as it was anciently spelt, is of very great antiquity. It derives its origin from a Saxon source, possessed property in England previous to the CONQUEST, and is recorded in Domesday. Subsequently to this, some of the family resided in Hants, and three Godards are recorded in the Winton Domesday, as residing and possessing land there. temp. HENRY I. After this period, becoming more numerous, the family appears to have separated, one branch having settled in the co. of Leicester and Norfolk, time of King JOHN (recorded in Chancellor's Rolls, 3rd year of King JOHN, 1202).

In 1233, Thomas Godard, son of Godard, held lands in Middleton, co. Norfolk. In 31st of EDWARD III., a fine was levied on the lands of Nicholas Godard, of the same place. Lands were conveyed to Nicholas and Walter Godard, 3rd of RICHARD II. About this time Walter Godard was lord of Denvers, having m. the heiress of that family; his heir, Robert Godard, held a lordship in Walspole, and was buried in Terrington Church, 1448. Of this family was Sir John Godard, Governor of Louiers, in Normandy, 6th HENRY V. (See Bloomfield's Nor.)

In the reign of King JOHN we gain the first authentic information of the settlement of the Godard family in Wilts.

WALTER GODARD-VILLE, or GODARD-VIL, who, for some purpose, appears to have added to his originally Saxon name the Norman termination of ville (which his descendants as readily discarded), held tenelements and lands in Chippenham and Abourn, co. Wilts. He was father of

JOHN GODARD, de Poulton, temp. RICHARD II., whose son,

JOHN GODARD, de Poulton, father of

WALTER GODARD, de Cherill, living 1460, whose son, JOHN GODARD, de Upham, in Albourn, (in which his ancestor, Walter Godard-ville had possessed lands several centuries before,) and de Cliffe Pypard. GRANT OF KILMURRY.

GRANT, THOMAS-ST. JOHN, Esq. of Kilmurry, co. Cork, J.P., and D.L. co. Waterford, high sheriff for co. Waterford in 1852, and for co. Cork in 1858; b. 20 Sept. 1822; m. 15 Aug. 1849, Eliza-Anna-Louisa, youngest dau. of Rev. Thomas Hoare, of Glenanore, by Mary-Anne, dau. of Henry-Jesse Lloyd, Esq. of Lloydaboro, co. 1. THOMAS-ST. JOHN, b. 23 Sept. 1852.

2. Edward-Hoare, b. 4 May, 1856.

Lineage.—The first individual of this family, of whom any documentary accounts are handed down, was CAPTAIN ASPER GRANT, R.N., two of whose commissions are preserved, one dated 17 April, 1669, appointing him to the command of the "Mermald;" the other, 3 April, 1672, to be command of the "Reserve." Both commissions are signed with the autograph of James, Duke of York, then high admiral of England (afterwards JAMES II.). This officer obtained, in the year 1667, an assignment of a mortgage of the lands of Grantstown, or Ballygraunt (therein so called), and in the following year, 1668, he obtained conveyance in fee of the same from William Dobyln. In his document he is described as Captain Jasper Grant, of the city of Waterford. Now it appears from Smith's and Glend's Histories of Waterford, that a family of Grants were from an early period residents of the city and neighbourhood of Waterford. In the year 1447 the Grants are included with the Powers (i. e. Poers), Walshes and Duttons, in an enactment of HENRY VI., by which the citizens of Waterford are authorized to make war upon them as rebels and traitors. These two histories furnish a list of the civic officers of the city from an early date, which brings down the Waterford Grants to the year 1640, and in the year 1667, Captain Jasper Grant comes on the stage as purchaser of an estate called Ballygraunt or Grantstown, and described as of the city of Waterford. It appears probable that in those early times of disorder and spoliation this family forfeited their paternal estate, which then passed into other hands, still retaining its name; that afterwards they regained their character for loyalty so as to entitle them to distinguished positions in the borough of Waterford, and that finally one of them was enabled to purchase back his family inheritance, and become as it were a re-founder of his race. Captain Jasper Grant, R.N., of Grantstown, m. sometime about the year 1667, Gillian Hely, of Kinsale, sister of Francis Hely, afterwards of the city of Cork, Gent., and had a son,

Lineage.—The Granvilles claim descent from ROLLO, the celebrated northern chieftain, who, being driven from Norway by the king of Denmark, made a descent upon England, but was repulsed by King ALFRED. In 870 he invaded Normandy, and achieved its complete conquest in 912. On being baptized and christened Robert, he m. Robert Fitz Hamon was 3rd Earl of Corbelle, Lord of Thorigny, Granville, Brelly, and Creully, in Normandy; and Lord of Gloucester, Bristol, Tewkesbury, and Cardiff, in England. The Monasticon and Leland relate, that at the time of the Conquest he was also Lord of Astremerville, in Normandy, and, in his youth, came with his brother, Richard, into England with the CONQUEROR (being of the blood of Rollo), and that both brothers were present with him at the battle of Hastings (1066), and for their signal services, the CONQUEROR bestowed upon them large gifts and honours. In the 4th of WILLIAM RUFUS, he reduced, with twelve knights, Glamorganshire, and m. Sibill, dau. of Roger de Montgomery, Earl of Shrewsbury, leaving four daus., the eldest of whom, Mabel, m. Robert, Earl of Gloucester, eldest natural son of HENRY I., by Nesta, dau. of REES, king of South Wales, and with whom went all the English honours and estates; but his Norman honours, &c. devolved, at his death, upon his brother, Richard de Granville, who became, thereupon, 4th Earl of Corbelle, Lord of Thorigny, Granville, Brelly, and Creully. He was one of the twelve knights chosen by his brother in the reduction of Glamorganshire, and in reward for this service, had, for his share, Neath and its territory, where he founded a monastery, A.D. 1129. He also possessed the castle and lordship of Bideford in Devon, and Kilkhampton in Cornwall, granted by the CONQUEROR for his services at the battle of Hastings, with other estates in Somerset, Bucks, and Gloucester. Sir Richard d. 18 March, 1551, and was s. by his grandson,

RICHARD GRANVILLE, Knt. of Stow, a gallant naval commander, who, at the age of 16, by permission of Queen ELIZABETH, served in the Imperial army in Hungary, and stained high reputation for his achievements against the Infidels. Returning soon after to his native country, he joined the troops employed for the reduction of Ireland, and there acquiring the confidence of the Lord-Deputy Sydney, was appointed sheriff of the city of Cork. In 1571, he represented the co. of Cornwall in parliament; and, subsequently, high sheriff for that shire, 1578, and complimented with the honour of knighthood. But the bias of his mind bent chiefly on the plans of foreign discovery, proposed by his relative, Sir Walter Raleigh, preferring the enterprise of a naval, to the quiet of a senatorial life. He, accordingly, with a squadron fitted out for the purpose, sailed for the coast of Florida in 1583, where he left a colony of 100 men, and then returned home. Many and successful were his subsequent voyages, and in the memorable year of the Spanish invasion, he was intrusted with the care of Cornwall, which prevented, for a while, his distinction in a proper sphere of action. In 1591, however, Sir Richard was despatched as vice-admiral under Lord Thomas Howard, with eight men of war, besides small vessels and tenders to intercept a rich Spanish fleet from the West Indies. This convoy, protected by a very superior force, unexpectedly appearing, Admiral Howard considering the great disproportion of the rival squadrons, immediately put to sea, and the rest of his ships, in some confusion, followed his example, except the "Revenge," the ship commanded by Granville, who having 90 men sick out of 250, and many others on shore, could not weigh anchor for a considerable time, which prevented him from gaining the wind, and brought the hostile fleet on his weather bow. The Spanish admiral with four other ships, began a close attack at three in the afternoon; the engagement lasted till break of day next morning, during which the enemy, notwithstanding their vast superiority of force, were driven off fifteen times. At length the greater part of the English crew being either killed or wounded, and the ship reduced to a wreck, no hope of escape remained. Far, however, from thinking of a surrender, Sir Richard exhorted his men rather to yield themselves to the mercy of Heaven than to the Spaniards, and to blow the ship up. But this design was frustrated by the master, who went on board the Spanish admiral and made known their situation. As soon as the "Revenge" was in the power of the Spaniards, the admiral gave orders to remove Sir Richard, who was grievously wounded, to his own ship, but the gallant officer survived only three days. John Evelyn, relating this heroic action, exclaims, "Than this, what have we more? What can be greater?" Sir Richard m. Mary, eldest dau. and co-heir of Sir John St. Leger, of Annery, in co. Devon. i. BRVIL, his heir.

ii. Richard (Sir), Knt. and Bart., a cavalier commander of great celebrity. This gallant soldier, who learned the rudiments of war under Prince Maurice, in Germany, attended King CHARLES I. in his expedition to Scotland; and was, subsequently, employed in Ireland in quelling the rebellion there, having under his orders his near kinsman, the famous George Monk (afterwards Duke of Albemarle). On the commencement of the civil war he proceeded to London in order to obtain some arrears due to him by the parliament, and having effected this, he contrived, by amusing the Commons with the hope that he would accept the command of the horse under Sir Will. Waller, to join the king at Oxford with his whole regiment, and he thenceforward advanced the Royal cause, in an especial degree, by his consummate skill and bravery. From Oxford, Sir Richard marched on Saltsch, which, with only 700 men, he captured; but some differences having unfortunately arisen between him and Clarendon, he was removed from his command. Retiring to Jersey, he equipped some privateers, and greatly harassed the republicans by sea. He eventually fixed his residence in France, and dying at Ghent, was interred in the English church, where this simple inscription marks the sacred spot:—

"Sir Richard Granville, the King's General in the West." He m. Mary, dau. of Sir John Fitz, of Pittsford; and had one son, who was put to death by the parliament; and one dau., Elizabeth, m. to Col. William Lenard, a staunch Royalist.

Sir Bernard Granville d. in 1636. His eldest son, the celebrated

SIR BEVIL GRANVILLE, Knt. of Stow and Bideford, one of the boldest and most successful of the cavalier leaders, and called the "Bayard" of England, whose appropriate motto was, Deo, Patria, Amici, was b. 23 March, 1595. He was educated at Exeter College, Oxford, and made so rapid a progress in learning, that the degree of B.A. was conferred on him at the age of 17. He represented the co. of Cornwall in parliament, 18 of JAMES I., 1620 to 1623; again, in the reign of CHARLES I., was member for Launceston, 1625, and for several succeeding parliaments. In 1638, he raised, at his own expense, a troop of horse, with which he accompanied the king in his first expedition against the Scottish rebels, and, on that occasion, received the honour of knighthood. In 1642, on the first outbreaking of the civil wars, he joined the royal standard, and marching into Cornwall, rescued that whole county from the parliament, attacking the partisans of the Commons who had risen in great numbers in the west, and routed them at Bodmin, Launceston, and Stratton. His last and most brilliant action was at Lansdowne Hill, near Bath, where he fell in the arms of victory, on 5 July, 1643.* "On the king's part," says Clarendon, in detailing this engagement, "there were more officers and gentlemen of quality slain than common men, and more hurt than slain. That which would have clouded any victory, and made the loss of others less spoken of, was the death of Sir Bevil Granville. He was, indeed, an excellent person, whose activity, interest, and reputation, was the foundation of what had been done in Cornwall; and his temper and affection so public, that no accident which happened could make any impression on him, and his example kept others from taking anything ill, or at least seeming to do so. In a word, a brighter courage and a gentler disposition were never married together to make the most cheerful and innocent conversation." Sir Bevil m. Grace, dau. of Sir George Smythe, of Matford, in Heavitree, near Exeter, Knt., and had issue, seven sons and six daus., viz.,

* A monument was afterwards erected to him on the spot where he fell, by his grandson, George Granville, Lord Lansdowne; and was repaired, and an iron railing placed round it, by his great great-grandson, Court Granville, in 1827.

To revert to the 3rd surviving son of Sir Bevil, JOHN, who attended CHARLES II in all his wanderings abroad, was only 16 years old when he took the command of his father's regiment, and was in all the considerable battles of the west of England, as well as the battle of Newbury, where he was severely wounded. Sir John was chosen negotiator and messenger from the king, to deliver to both Houses of Parliament the king's letters from Breda, and received their acknowledgments for his services in that transaction. Thus pointed out to his country as a principal instrument of the Restoration, he was further rewarded with such honours as his services and those of his family might justly claim. He was, therefore, on the restoration of CHARLES II, created Earl of Bath, Viscount Lansdowne, and Baron Granville, of Bideford and Kilkhampton; also permitting him to use the titles of Earl of Corbottle, Thorigny, and Granville (as his ancestors had done), to him and his posterity. He m. Jane, dau. of Sir Peter Wyche, and dying in 1701, left issue,

For a more detailed account of the ennobled branches of the Granville family, refer to BURKE's Extinct and Dormant Peerage.

We now come to Sir Bevil's 4th son,

BERNARD GRANVILLE* was very young at his father's decease, and made his escape from school to join his brother John in defence of the Scilly islands, besieged by Admiral Blake, to which place he conveyed large reinforcements. He was ever after very active in the service of CHARLES II. during his exile: "When all was concluded for his Majesty's restoration, and his brother Sir John Granville had received the thanks of both houses of Parliament for the letters he brought, General Monk thought it proper to send his last despatches by one he could trust, which was Bernard Granville, his first cousin,† who was to inform his Majesty that everything was ready for his reception." He was gentleman of the bedchamber to the Duke of Gloucester during his exile, and after the Restoration, gentleman of the horse and groom of the bedchamber to CHARLES II. He was M.P. for Lostwithiel the 1st of CHARLES II, and served for Launceston, Saltash, and Bodmin, in all the Parliaments in that reign; also for Plymouth let JAMES II, also for Saltash again in the reign of WILLIAM till the day of his death. ii. Frances-Alice-Devereux.

Mr. Bagshawe is a magistrate for the co. of Derby.

Lineage.—The name of Bagshawe, which is of Saxon origin, and signifies "a small wooded glen," was taken by this family from their ancient residence in the Peak of Derbyshire. From Bagshawe, which is situated in the parish of Chapel-en-le-Firth, they appear to have removed, within a century after the Norman conquest, to the Ridge, a commanding eminence in the same parish, distant only two miles from their former home. Here they remained for upwards of six hundred years, until the Ridge estate was conveyed by marriage to the father of Sir William Fitzherbert, Bart. of Tissington. The Bagshawes of Ford, also in the parish of Chapel-en-le-Firth, then became the representatives of the family. In the Harl. MS., 1093, fo. 27, the direct descendants of the first Thomas Bagshawe, of the Ridge (who was living in 1141), are traced for five generations, and from Blore's MSS. some further particulars respecting the early history of this family may be obtained. The immediate ancestor of the Bagshawes of Abney, Ford, Hucklow, and Wormhill, was

THOMAS BAGSHAW, of the Ridge, mentioned amongst "the persons of quality," residing in the co. of Derby, whose names were returned by royal commissioners, 12 HENRY VI. His 4th son,*

* The elder line was continued by

HENRY BAGSHAW, of the Ridge, who m. Joane, dau. of Nicholas Eyre, of Nether Hurst, co. Derby, elder brother of Stephen Eyre, of Hiascop, co. Derby, ancestor of the Earls of Newburgh. He left issue, a son,

THOMAS BAGSHAW, of the Ridge, who m. Cecilia, dau. of Richard Blackwell, of Blackwell, co. Derby, nephew of Sir Robert Lytton, of Lytton, co. Derby. His eldest surviving son,

EDWARD BAGSHAW, of the Ridge, m. Jane, dau. of John

NICHOLAS BAGSHAW, of Wormhill, co. Derby, forester to the king, mentioned in his father's will, 16 HENRY VI.; m. Alice, dau. and co-heir of John de la Hall, of Hucklow, co. Derby, forester to the king, whose ancestor, of the same name, was so created by deed, dated 1349. The shares of the other sisters, Johanna, Cecilia, and Emma de la Hall, in the lands and forestry of their father, were conveyed by them, in 1449 and 1451, to Nicholas Bagshawe, and thus became vested in the Bagshawe family. The son and heir of this marriage was,

WILLIAM BAGSHAW, of Abney, co. Derby, whose descendants were long seated at Abney, and Farwell Abbey, co. Stafford. They were lords of the manor of Abney, and intermarried with the Rugeleys, of Longdon, co. Stafford, lords of the manor of Bylson; with the Bowdons, of Bowdon, co. Derby; and the families of Harourt, Lynacre, Bainbridge, and Grotorex of Grotorex, co. Derby. As each generation of this branch of the Bagshawe is given in BURKE'S Commoners, it will be sufficient to add the following particulars, which are not there recorded. The name of Sir William Bagshawe, of Hope, co. Derby, occurs in 1523, amongst the title deeds of the Ford estate; and another member of the family, Sir Francis Bagshawe, settled in Ireland, and d. at Finglas, near Dublin, 6 Oct. 1657; Frances, dau. of Nicholas Bagshawe, of Abney, and Farwell Abbey (who registered his pedigree and arms at Glover's visitation of Staffordshire in 1583), m. to Sir John Bentley, of Breadall Park, co. Derby; and Alice, dau. of Nicholas Bagshawe, of Abney, was wife of Robert Shakelley, of Longton, co. Derby, and mother of Grace, Countess of Shrewsbury. The 5th in direct descent from William Bagshawe, of Abney, abovementioned,

WILLIAM BAGSHAW, of Hucklow, Abney, Linton, and Ford, co. Derby, lord of the manor of Hucklow, appeared at Sir William Dugdale's visitation of Derbyshire in 1605, and was then 64 years of age. He d. in 1609, leaving (with other issue) three sons, who were the founders of three families, all wealthy, and respected,

1 William Bagshawe, Esq. of Hucklow, whose son, John Bagshawe, Esq. of Hucklow, d. unm. 5 May, 1721, and was s. by his only sister,

Grace Bagshawe, who conveyed the Bagshawe estates to her husband, Aymer Rich, Esq. of Bull House, co. York. (See MILNES of Fryton.)

2 Elizabeth, wife of Alexander Radclyffe, Esq. of Fendleton, co. Lancaster. (See RADCLYFFE of Fendleton.)

iii. Adam, of Wormhill (see that family).

The eldest son,

WILLIAM BAGSHAW, of Ford Hall, b. at Lytton, 17 Jan. 1627-8, and educated at Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, was appointed Vicar of Glossop, co. Derby, and afterwards became extensively known as a nonconformist divine, under the designation of "The Apostle of the Peak." Having displeased his family by taking holy orders, he was partially disinherited; the estates to which he succeeded being not a third in value of those which were left to his younger brother, John Bagshawe. During the last forty Shallcross, of Shallcross, co. Derby, and had issue with a dau., Agnes, wife of James Lynacre, of Lynacre, a son, Lineage.—The family Greer claims descent from the Grierson branch of the Clan MacGregor.

JAMES GREER, from whom the Irish branch springs, removed, it is very probable, from the parent stock, at Lag, co. Dumfries, about the commencement of the 17th century, and settled in the neighbouring English county of Cumberland, where we find him in 1633; but the exact date when this took place is not stated, but the family records mention that James Greer, and Mary, his wife, of the Rock, Cumberland, had, inter alios, a son, HENRY, and a dau., Anne, who m. Thomas Turner, of Turnershead, co. Cumberland, and with her husband removing to Ireland, was ancestor of the Turners of Turner's Hill, near Newry, co. Armagh. The son,

HENRY GREER, Esq., m. in 1652, Mary, sister of the above-named Thomas Turner, and removed with her, in 1653, to Ireland, where they finally settled at Lurgan, co. Armagh, and dying there, left two sons, Robert, the younger, and his heir,

Lineage.—The GREERS of Tyrone claim descent (as already stated under GREER of Grange) through the Griens, or Griersons, of Lag, co. Dumfries, from the Clan MacGregor in Scotland, and this claim is sustained by the strongest traditional and corroborative evidence. HENRY GREER, the first settler in Ireland, was son of James Greer, a scion of the Lag family, who left Scotland and fixed his abode in the border county of Cumberland. Henry m. Mary Turner, and was father inter alios of a son and heir,

Lineage.—The Guinnesses of Beaumont, who have long ranked foremost amongst the merchants of the city of Dublin, paternally descend from the ancient and eminent house of Magennis, in which formerly vested the Viscounty of Iveagh (see BURKE's Extinct Peerage). Several members of the Iveagh family lie interred in the churchyard of St. Catherine's, Dublin, and in the parish register, the transition of the name from Magennis to McGuinness or Guinness, is clearly traceable. Maternally, the Guinnesses of Beaumont have an ancient and distinguished line of English ancestors, being sprung from the LEES of Quarendon, raised to the British peerage in 1674, as Earls of Lichfield. The first who bore the name, as at present spelt, was

Mr. Gurney was elected M.P. for Shaftesbury in 1812, and for Newtown, Hants, in 1816, and six successive parliaments, and was high sheriff of Norfolk in 1835. Mrs. Gurney d. 16 Dec. 1855.

Lineage.—The name of Gurney, or Gournay, is derived from the town of Gournay, in Normandy.

When Normandy was ceded to Rollo by CHARLES THE SIMPLE, in 912, it is stated by the local historians that the town of Gournay, and adjacent territory of Le Brail, was given to EUDRE, one of his followers, from whom descended the ancient lords of Gournay. The first of these, authenticated by deed, was REGINALD, LORD OF GOURNAY, whose son, WALTER, founded the monastery of La Ferté, about the year 996, with the consent of HUGH, his elder brother. Another Hugh, called HUGH II, was one of the Norman generals at the battle of Mortemer, in 1054; he and HUGH III were at the battle of Hastings. This latter m. Basilia Flaitel, and from him the descents of this family are clear; she was dau. of Gerard Flaitel, and sister (with Agnes, wife of William Gifford, Earl of Buckingham) of William, Bishop of Evreux. HUGH DE GOURNAY III held manors in Essex at the time of the survey, and d. at the Abbey of Bec, in Normandy, where he was shorn a monk before the year 1093.

GERARD DE GOURNAY, was his son; he m. Editha, dau. of William, 1st Earl Warren, by Gundreda, who, according to the Warren charters, was a dau. of WILLIAM the Conqueror. With her he received in frank marriage various manors. He held in Norfolk, Calster-by-the-Sea, Cantley, Hardingham, Lessingham, Kimberley, &c., from the forfeiture of Ralph Guader. Calster was the caput baronie of the Gournays in England. Gerard de Gournay had several children, HUGH DE GOURNAY IV was eldest son; Walter de Gournay, a younger son; and his dau. were Gundrida, who m. Nigel de Albini, in 1118; and a 2nd dau. m. Richard de Talbot, ancestor of the Earl of Shrewsbury. Gerard de Gournay d. about the year 1104, in the Holy Land, and Editha, his widow, re-married Dreux de Moneaux.

HUGH DE GOURNAY IV was eldest son of Gerard; he m. twice, 1st, Beatrice, dau. of Hugh, Count of Vermandois; and 2ndly, Millicent de Maria, dau. of Thomas, Lord of Coucy; he d. in 1180, at a great age, leaving by his 2nd wife, Hugh de Gournay V, and a dau. Gunnora, who m. Nicholas de Stuteville, who had with her Kimberley and Bedingham, in Norfolk.

HUGH DE GOURNAY V, vacillated between King JOHN and Philip Augustus, and eventually lost all his Norman possessions in 1204, and took refuge in England, where he d. in 1214, and was buried at Langley Abbey, Norfolk. He m. Julia de Dampmartin, sister of Reginald, Count of Boulogne, and had a son, Hugh VI, and a dau., Millicent, m. 1st, to Almeric, Count of Evreux, and 2ndly, to William de Cantelupe.

HUGH DE GOURNAY VI d. in 1235, having m. Matilda —, and left an only dau., Julia, who carried the English inheritance of this elder line of the Gournays to the Bardolfs, she having m. William, Lord Bardolf, of Wormegay, in Norfolk, and d. in 1295. These Lords of Gournay are said to have borne for arms a shield, pure sable; they are now represented, in the female line, by Lord Beaumont, through the families of Bardolf, Pheip, Beaumont, Lovel, and Stapleton.

Two younger branches of this family continued to exist from this period; the one which was the most distinguished was seated at Barew-Gurney and Ingilshcombe, in Somersetshire, as early as the Survey, and retaining the name of Gournay, through two female descents, added to their territory the estates of the Harpetrees and other considerable families, and became powerful barons in the west of England. The most generally known of this family of the Gournays was Sir Thomas de Gournay, one of the murderers of EDWARD II, and his youngest son, Sir Matthew de Gournay, frequently mentioned by Froissart, who d. in 1406, at the advanced age of 96, after having assisted at all the great battles of EDWARD III and the Black Prince. This gallant veteran appears to have been the last of the Somersetshire Gurneys; they bore for arms paly of six, or, and azure.

The other younger branch of the Lords of Gournay held certain manors in Norfolk as mesne lords under the Barons of Gournay, the capital tenants. These were—Runhall, Swathings-in-Hardingham, Hingham-Gurneys, and others. They also held the fief of Montigny-sur-Andelle, in Normandy, parcel of the great territory of Le Brail, which belonged to the elder line. This fief of Montigny they held by the tenure called parage, in capite of the Duke of Normandy, it having been severed in their favour on the death of Gerard de Gournay.

WALTER DE GOURNAY, younger son of Gerard and Editha de Warren, was the ancestor of this line; he lived during the civil wars in the reign of STEPHEN. (See Liber Niger Scaccarii, by Hearne. Vol. I., p. 298.)

WILLIAM DE GOURNAY I was his son, living 1167, and was father to

MATTHEW DE GOURNAY, to whom Hamoline Plantagenet, Earl Warren, gave in marriage his kinswoman, Rose de Burnham, and with her the manor of Harpley, in Norfolk, about the year 1180.

WILLIAM DE GOURNAY II was his son and heir, living in 1235. By Katherine, his wife, he was father of

SIR JOHN DE GOURNAY, Knt., I, who fought on the side of the barons against HENRY III at the battles of Lewes and Evesham, and forfeited the manor of South Wootton, in Norfolk, in consequence. He accompanied Prince Edward, afterwards EDWARD I, to the Holy Land, in 1270. He bore for arms argent, a cross, engrailed, gu., since borne by his descendants.

SIR WILLIAM DE GOURNAY, Knt., III, was his son, who m. Katherine, dau. of Edmund Raconsthorpe, and sold for an annuity, in 1294, all his estates to his brother, John de Gournay, Rector and Patron of Harpley, who settled them on

JOHN DE GOURNAY III, son of William III, and his wife, Jane, dau. of Edmund de Lexham, who succeeded in 1322.

JOHN DE GURNEY IV was his son, and father of

EDMUND DE GURNEY, who lived in the reign of EDWARD III and RICHARD II. He was a lawyer of eminence, and held the situation of standing council, or recorder as it would now be called, of the city of Norwich and borough of Lyna. He m. Katherine de Wauncy, the heiress of the family of that name, of West Barnham, in Norfolk, and where the Gurneys were subsequently settled. He d. in 1385.

SIR JOHN DE GURNEY, Knt., V, was his son. He was sheriff of Norfolk and Suffolk in 1400, and knight of the shire for the former county at the parliament which met at Coventry, in 1404. He d. in 1408, leaving a son, Edmund, who d. under age.

WILLIAM GURNEY, Esq., IV, was his son and heir. He was coheir to Norfolk, and lived at West Barnham and Pockthorpe, a suburb of Norwich. He m. Anne, dau. of

Sir William Calthorpe, Knt., and d. in 1508, having survived his eldest son, WILLIAM GURNEY V, who m. Anne, dau. of Sir Henry Heydon, of Baconsthorpe, Norfolk, Knt., who was cousin of Queen Ann Boleyn; with her he had the manor of Irstead, in Norfolk. She survived him, and remarried Sir Lionel Dymocke, Knt.

ANTHONY GURNEY, Esq., his son, was grandson and heir of William Gurney IV. He lived in the reign of HENRY VIII, and m. Margaret, one of the daus. and co-heirs of Sir Robert Lovel, Knt., and through her mother, of the families of Conyers of Finingham, Fitz-Ralf, and of the Barons Mortimer of Atleboro'. He resided chiefly at Great Ellingham, and had seven sons and five daus. Of these, Edmund Gurney, his 3rd son, was Rector of Harpley, and author of several theological works. He was puritanically inclined, and took the Covenant. Francis Gurney was Henry Gurney's 6th son, and was a merchant, and ancestor of the present family of the GURNEYS of Kewick, of whom hereafter.

THOMAS GURNEY, Esq., III, of West Barsham, was eldest son of Henry. He m. Martha, dau. of Sir Edward Lowknor, Knt. of Denham, in Suffolk, and d. in 1616, leaving a large family, of whom

EDWARD GURNEY, Esq., of West Barsham, was his eldest son. He m. Frances, dau. of Richard Howell, of Hillington, in Norfolk, Esq., and d. in 1641, leaving,

Lineage.—The surname of Guthrie, is of great antiquity in Scotland. Crawford, in his Lives of the Officers of State, says, that the Guthries held the barony of Guthrie by charter from King DAVID II. But that they were men of rank and property long before the reign of JAMES II, is manifest, by the fact that Master Alexander, of Guthrie, is a witness, in a charter granted by Alexander Seaton, Lord of Gordon, to William, Lord Keith, afterwards Earl Marshal, dated 1 Aug. 1442; and that he obtained the lands of Kilkandrum, in the barony of Lower Leslie, and sheriffdom Forfar, to himself and Marjory Guthrie, his spouse, by charter, from George, Lord Leslie, of Leven, the Superior, dated 10 April, 1457. By the above-mentioned Marjory, he had three sons, of whom the eldest,

SIR DAVID GUTHRIE, Baron of Guthrie, was sheriff of Forfar in the year 1457. He held the high situation of armour-bearer to King JAMES III, and was constituted Lord Treasurer of Scotland in 1461, in which post he continued until 1467, when he was appointed Comptroller of the Exchequer. In 1469, he was made Lord Register of Scotland; and in 1472, we find him one of the ambassadors on the part of Scotland, who met those of England, on the 25th April, in that year, at Newcastle, and concluded a truce till the month of July, 1473. In 1473, he was constituted lord chief justice of Scotland. Sir David Guthrie, m. 1st, a dau. of Sir Thomas Maule, Lord of Panmure, but had no issue. He m. 2ndly, Janet, dau. of Sir Archibald Dundas, of Dundas, by whom he had (with a dau., Elizabeth, m. to Alexander Maule, ancestor of the Earls of Panmure) a son,

He was assassinated at his house of Inverpeffer, where he was residing, by his cousin, Patrick Gairden, of Gairden, in consequence of a feud that had arisen between the two families. He had m. Isabel, dau. of William Wood, of Bonnytown, and left three sons, viz.,

PATRICK GUTHRIE, who became "of GUTHRIE," and was s. therein, at his decease, by his son,

PETER GUTHRIE, whose retour bears date 24 May, 1636.

Proprietor disposed the lands and barony to the Rev. John Guthrie, Bish. of Moray, descended from John Guthrie, of Hilltown, 4th son of Sir Alexander Guthrie and Margaret Lyon, who, having obtained a charter of confirmation under the great seal, dated 25 Nov. 1631, and being infeft therein on the 29th Dec. following, became, JOHN GUTHRIE, of Guthrie. GYLL OF WYRARDISBURY.

GYLL, BROOKE-HAMILTON, Esq. of Wyrardisbury House, Bucks, and Yeovany Hall, co. Middlesex, b. 16 July, 1795; m. 3 May, 1821, Maria-Jane, dau. of William Richardson, Esq., Accountant-General to the East India Company, by Elizabeth, his wife, widow of Edward, 1st Earl of Winterton. Mrs. Gyll d. 21 July following her marriage, aged 27, and was buried at Wyrardisbury.

Lineage.—The name of Gyll, says Camden, in his Britannia, means valley, and has been variously spelt according to the fluctuations of orthography in different ages. Ellis, in his Domesday-Book, shows that a family of this name held lands in Yorkshire antecedent to the Norman invasion. The barony and property of Gille's land, in Cumberland, prior to the Conquest, belonged to Bueth Gille, and was confiscated by WILLIAM the Conqueror, who granted them to Hubert, one of his followers. Hubert assumed the name of the original proprietor, and styled himself de Vaux, which is the French for valley, and is synonymous with Gill. Robert de Vaux, son of Hubert, barbarously murdered Bueth Gille, and his posterity resided on the territory till it passed by marriage to the family of Thomas de Multon. In the reign of HENRY III it was conveyed to Ranulphus de Dacre, and the possessions remained in his family till the last heir male, Lord Dacre, of Gille's land, alienated it to the Duke of Norfolk. It is probable that the John Gille, whose inquis. post mortem was taken 44 Edw. III, at Greystock, in Cumberland, was the descendant of Bueth Gille, who held the Barony of Gille's land. He left issue, John Gille, son and heir.

The immediate ancestors of the family of Gyll, or Gille, of Herta, resided in Cambridgeshire, where we find Richard, son of John Gille, holding lands under Robert de Freville, of Shelford Parva, Cambridgeshire, temp. Edw. I, and Walter and Bateman Gille, of Foxton, near Royston, Cambridge, at the same time. (v. Rol. Hundredorum, temp. Edw. I.)

RICHARD GYLLE, of Cambridgeshire, is cited in a deed of fine, Hilary, 1 RICHARD III, 1483, Westminster.

JOHN GYLL, the son of Richard, having married a lady of Buckland, migrated thither, and bought lands, messuages, &c., as appears by deeds, and his will, 1490. Members of the same family are found in Maurice Gyll, who d. Vicar of Shudy Campe, Cambridge, 1448; and Isabella Gyll, of Shepreth, in the same county, whose will is proved at Ely, 1485, by which she leaves to her dau. and heir, Rosa, m. to John Marshall, Esq., all her property.

JOHN GYLL, of Buckland, m. Johanna, probably dau. of Sir William Horne, Kt. of the same locality, as he says he obtained the lands he held there from him, and dying 23 Jan. 1499 (his will was proved 8 Feb. following), left issue, blous times. Sir Patrick Hannay had been Clerk of the Privy Council in Ireland just before.

"The lands of Sorbie," says the learned herald—the standard genealogist of Scotland—Nisbet, "are now possessed by others, but the family is at present represented by Mr. Robert Hannay, of Kingsmuir."

This ROBERT HANNAY, who possessed Kingsmuir, co. Fife, in 1700, had obtained it by marrying a Livingstone, widow of Colonel Borthwick. Leaving no issue, he was a by his sister,

ANN HANNAY, of Kingsmuir. This lady (who was a Captain Erskine, of Dun, but was also childless) disposed of the estate, by will, to her friend and kinsman,

JAMES HANNAY, son of Patrick Hannay, from whom it passed to his brother,

JOHN HANNAY, Esq. of Kingsmuir. He m. Miss Brown, and left an heir,

GEORGE HANNAY, Esq. of Kingsmuir, who was in the service of the British Crown, in America, and so remained, till the Independence war drove him home. By his wife, a Miss Hamby, of Exeter, he left two sons,

I. PETER HANNAY, Esq. of Kingsmuir, who fought as a lieutenant in H. M. S. "Defiance" at Trafalgar, and d. a p.

II. GEORGE FRANCIS HANNAY, Esq., the present Laird of Kingsmuir, and head of the house of the Hannays of Galloway

Hannay of Grennan.

A junior branch of the Hannays—and the name, we may observe here, is purely Gaelic (never occurring, except by derivation from Galloway, anywhere else in Scotland)—was early settled at Grennan, in Wigtownshire. Originally, they also possessed Stancher, Stabreckan, the Gae, and other properties stretching towards Ayrshire; but Grennan, the land from which they took their designation, was also the latest which they possessed, down to our own time. The early Grennan titles are some of them lost, and some illegible, but there exist enough (in the possession of Sir John McTaggart, to whom the land belongs) to furnish us with the following list. Hugh Hannay, of Grennan, succeeded to a predecessor, in 1612; Hugh Hannay, of Grennan, in 1632; and Thomas Hannay, of Grennan, in 1658. This branch was of the strongest covenanting type, and "John Hannay in Grennan" is mentioned by Wodrow as fined for non-conformity in 1662. We next come to John Hannay, of Grennan, who m. in 1683, Janet Baillie: John Hannay, of Grennan, who m. in 1709, Joanna Wallace; and John Hannay, of Grennan, who m. in 1737, Mary Ross, of Cairnbrock, one of the Rosses from whom the great navigators derive. Here the direct line ended in co-heiresses, one of whom m. a namesake, and was mother, 1 of the late distinguished Dr. Alexander Hannay, a physician of Glasgow, who m. a dau. of Mr. Hannay, of Blairinnie, to be mentioned presently, and left issue; 2 of Robert Hannay, Esq., East India merchant.

An offshoot of the Grennan branch springing from a marriage in CHARLES II.'s time with a McCulloch, of Myreton, was settled before the end of that century at Knock and Garrarie, in Wigtownshire—farms belonging to their kinsmen, the Maxwells, baronets of Monreith, who had married into the McCulloch family about the same time. This ancient branch of the Maxwells were earnest covenanters also, and offered the lands in question on what were of old called "kindly" terms in Scotland—"as long as wood grew and water ran"—to their Hannay relatives. Of these,

JOHN HANNAY, Knock and Garrarie, m. in 1710, Janet, dau. of Mr. Patrick Dickson, of a stock which occurs as sufferers in the cause of the covenant, and had,

1. JOHN HANNAY, Knock and Garrarie, who m. his cousin, Griel Dickson. From him descended (among others) Peter Hannay, Baldoon, a well-known agriculturalist of the last century; the Hannays settled at Barwhirran; the late John Hannay, Esq. of Malabay; also, Alexander Hannay, Esq., now Banker at Dumfries; and Elliott Hannay, Esq. of the War Office.

2. ROBERT HANNAY, b. 1720; many years a merchant of Glasgow. He m. before 1744, Jean, dau. of Alexander Maxwell, Esq. of Newlaw, in Kirkcudbrightshire (by his 2nd marriage* with one of the Irrings of Cogart), son of Samuel, son of John, son of Edward, 3rd son of the celebrated John Maxwell, Lord Herries, the loyal friend of Mary Queen of Scots. dying in 1793, left, John, Robert, and Samuel, M.D., who all d. unm.; and

Of this marriage (Mr. Hannay, of Blairlinnie, having d. in 1830), the following sons survive,

- i. Robert Hannay, Esq., advocate.
- ii. David Hannay, Esq., formerly of Cardinark House, in Kirkcudbrightshire. He m. 1st, Elizabeth, dau. of Capt. William Affleck, and has surviving, Lineage.—The ancient Guernsey family of De Havilland is of Norman origin, and came from Cotantin, in Normandy. It has been known in the Isle of Guernsey since 1176, and members of the family have been solicitors and attorneys-general, jurats and bailiffs of the Royal Court, from the earliest records (see post, HAVILAND, of Ditton Hall, co. Cambridge. In a charter under the great seal of England, still extant, granted 1st Edward IV., the king confirms the ancient constitution of the island, and adds many new privileges, in consideration of the gallantry displayed, and the heavy losses sustained, by "LE SIEUR THOMAS DE HAVILLAND," and others, gentlemen of Guernsey, and their followers, in recovering Mont Orgueil Castle, in Jersey, from the French, by whom it had been held during the last six years of HENRY VI.'s reign, and, in commemoration, the crest of "a laurel branch" was added to the island arms. The Havillands in England are descended from JAMES DE HAVILLAND, who left Guernsey, and established himself at Poole, temp. EDWARD IV. He was second son of the said THOMAS DE HAVILLAND (see ante, HAVILAND-BURKE, of Beaconsfield). The eldest son was the

Lineage.—ROBERT, BARON DE HAVILLAND appears in A.D. 1130, as a witness to a charter of his neighbour Jordan Russel, lord of Barneville.—Archives de Normandie.

WILLIAM, BARON DE HAVILLAND, in the parishes of Gollerville and St. Colomba, near Valognes, accompanied Richard Cœur de Lion to Palestine, and in memory of this crusade added two martins to his paternal arms. This William subinfeoffed Thomas Carbonnel, of a powerful Norman family, of part of his Barony of Havilland of which he was tenant in capite. He was s. by his eldest son, PETER, LORD OF HAVILLAND, who by charter dated the 1st Feb. 1260, ceded to the Monastery of Montebourg his domes dictos as Prisons in the parish of St. Martin of Gollerville; to this charter is attached a green seal of his arms, viz.: a castle triple-towered, and on the side towers a martlet, surrounded by ✠ S^T PETER DE HAVILLAND. By another charter he confirms to the Sieur Thomas Carbonnel, all that his father had granted him by a previous charter, on condition of homage and service to be duly rendered, dated 16th March, 1262. From the Cartaire de l'Abbaye de Montebourg, in the possession of M. le Comte de Beaufort, it appears that in the 15th century this Abbey held some 200 acres of the barony of Havilland, of the gift of different Sieurs de Havilland.

ROBERT DE HAVILLAND in 1179 was deputy-governor of the island of Guernsey.—Rolls of the Norman Exchequer.

PHILIPP DE HAVILLAND was one of the barons present at the dedication of St. Martin's church, Guernsey, 1129.

ROBERT, BARON DE HAVILLAND, occurs as witness to a charter of Philip d'Aubigné, granting certain lands in Guernsey to the Monastery of St. Michael's Mount in 1214.

MICHAEL and RICHARD DE HAVILLAND each held a feud of the honour of Mortain under Philip, eldest son of Philip-Augustus, King of France, A.D. 1233, which feuds were forfeited for adherence to the English king.

RADULPH SIEUR DE HAVILLAND was one of the king's vavasseurs of the island of Guernsey, who in 1245 was summoned to give testimony at an inquisition as to the feuds held of the Crown in that island. He was also a jurat of Guernsey in 1254.—Norman Archives and Records in the Tower. The Norman islands since 1061, before the conquest of England by Duke William, have each been governed by a local legislature, of life tenure, composed of a governor called Bailiff, and twelve legislators with the title Jurats.

BERNARD DE HAVILLAND occurs in an insular document, and was succeeded by his son, WILLIAM, SIEUR DE HAVILLAND in 1299.—Tower Records. THOMAS DE HAVILLAND and WILLIAM DE HAVILLAND, HAMELIN DE HAVILLAND and BERNARD DE HAVILLAND, all four appear, in the Extent of A.D. 1331, as tenants in capite of feuds in the island of Guernsey.—Norman Archives.

THOMAS, SIEUR DE HAVILLAND, who fought with distinguished gallantry at the siege of Mont-Orgueil Castle, Jersey, in 1467; from whose eldest son the Guernsey line descends, (see DE HAVILLAND of Havilland Hall). He received, in reward for his services on that occasion, a patent conferring certain commercial privileges; to avail himself of which he established his second son JAMES at Poole, co. Dorset, from whom the Havillands of Gundeham Manor, Somersetshire, and Ditton Hall, lineally derive.—see HAVILLAND-BURKE of Beaconsfield. We resume the pedigree with

Lineage.—The HAWKINS are a family of great antiquity in the co. of Kent; the name being local from the parish of Hawking, in the hundred of Folkestone, written in the time of the Saxons, "Hawkyngne." The first of the name on record is Osbert de Hawking, temp. HENRY II.; and, in EDWARD III.'s reign the Hawkinses took up their residence at Nash Court, in the parish of Boughton-under-Blean, co. Kent, and in the parish church are still to be seen some of the monuments. The family resided at Nash Court till the year 1800, when Thomas Hawkins, of Nash Court, Esq., died, and the estate became the property of his four dau. as co-heirs, viz., Lady Teynham, Lady Knatchbull, Mrs. Gould, deceased, and Anne, who still survives, and who was m. to George De Billingham (lieut.-col. 7th dragoons), who afterwards assumed the name and arms of Woodruffe on succeeding his brother, in 1824, in his uncle's estate of Poyle Park, Surrey. By this marriage Lieut.-Col. Woodruffe had one dau. Mary-Theresa, who was m. to the late Francis Harold Duncombe, 74th Highlanders. The families of Nash being of the Roman Catholic persuasion, they suffered greatly at different times. The house of Nash was scandalously plundered by some of the neighbourhood, in 1715, during the ferment this nation was thrown into on account of the rebellion in Scotland, when the furniture, pictures, and writings of the estate were burnt, and an excellent library of books, and plate, carried off and never heard of afterwards. They experienced great losses at different periods, when younger members of the family were obliged to quit Kent and become located in other counties; one branch settled about 1554 in Cornwall, another in Somersetshire, from which Sir John Caesar Hawkins, Bart., and a third was established in Wales; from the latter was descended

Nicholl of Tredunnoch.

The origin of the ancient family of Nicholl, written at various periods Nyeol, Nicoll, Nicoll, Nicholls, and Nicholl, has been by antiquaries variously and largely treated upon. It is stated, that in the time of EDWARD THE CONFESSOR, one Nicholas de Albini, alias Nicell, or Nicholl, came over from Normandy, and was the common ancestor of the Nicholl family. In the co. Chester, Robert Fitz Nicell, or Nicholl, flourished soon after the Conquest, and in the same shire we find William, Baron of Malpas, who lived in the reigns of STEPHEN and HENRY II., bore for his arms "three pheons or darts' heads," as appears on his seal to the grant of the eighth part of Duckenton to his youngest son, Richard, his second son, Robert, having m. Mabel, dau. of Robert Fitz Nicell.

John Fitz-Nicholas held courts in 1307, for the Manor of Nichols, in the hundred of Hineford, Essex, called in the rolls the Manor of Nicholls, or Fitz-Nicholls. John Fitz-Nicholl held the same manor from 1327 to 1377. The Nicholl's of Essex bore for their arms "sa., a pheon, arg." In the county of Northampton, William Nicolls, Esq., of Hardwick, who was b. in 1479, carried "sa., three pheons, arg.," and was ancestor of the Nicolls, afterwards baronets, who had the same arms confirmed and ratified in 1588, with the addition of a canton, arg. Camden assigned similar arms to the Nicholls of Trewane, in Cornwall, with a crescent for difference; and the seal of John Nicholl, Esq., of Llantwitt Major, Glamorganshire, whose will was proved in 1599, was "sa., three pheons, arg.," thus fully proving that the different families of Nicholl have in all ages borne the pheons for their coat armour. The precise date of the settlement of the Nicholl family in Glamorganshire is not known; but from the will of John Nicholl, dated in 1598, and proved the following year, it is very evident they were a family of consequence, from the property they then possessed. John desires to be buried by his father, Iltid Nicholl, in Llantwitt Church, which Iltid, it is natural to suppose, was s. at Llantwitt, having been christened after the patron saint of Llantwitt, Saint Iltutus, or Iltid. HAYMAN OF MYRTLE GROVE AND SOUTH ABBEY.

HAYMAN, THE REV. SAMUEL, of South Abbey, Youghal, co. Cork, B.A. (and formerly fellow commoner) of Trinity College, Dublin, b. 27 July, 1813; m. at St. Anne's Church, Belfast, 26 Sept. 1854, Emily, dau. (by Henrietta, his wife, dau. and co-heiress of Samuel Jackson, Esq. of Stormount, co. Down) of the late Rev. Mark Cassidi, M.A., Chancellor of Kilfenora and Incumbent of Newton-arls, and by her has issue,

EMILY-HENRIETTA-ALINE.

Lineage—The family of HEYMAN, or HAYMAN (for it has been spelled both ways), is of Norman descent; and their genealogical roll embraces a period of more than nine centuries.

ROLLO, the Sea King, by his marriage with Gisla, sister of CHARLES THE SIMPLE, king of France, left issue, at his death, in 931 (along with two daus., Crepina, wife of Grimaldus, Prince of Monaco, and Gerletta, wife of William, Duke of Aquitaine), two sons, WILLIAM LONGWORD, Duke of Normandy (through whom derived WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR of England, and the English kings), and

ROBERT, created Earl of Corbeil, in direct succession from whom was

HAIMON DENTATUS, 6th Earl of Corbeil, and Baron of Tournay and Granville. He was slain at the battle of le Val des Dunes, near Caen, in 1037, leaving four sons, who all accompanied the Duke of Normandy in his English invasion of 1066,

ROBERT FITZ-HAMON, or (as Thierry writes it) FITZ-AYMON, the conqueror of South Wales.

Haimon, surnamed in the Domesday Survey, Dapifer.

Richard, ancestor of the GRANVILLE family. (See that name.)

CREQUEUR, or CREVE-CEUR, Lord of Chatham, whose line we follow.

Crève-cœur-en-Ange, in the arrondissement of Lisieux, gave its title to the Earl of Corbeil's youngest son, whose Christian name seems, from the family records, to have been HUGO, or HUGH. In the Battle Abbey roll he is called "Crequeurs;" and he appears in an old French chronicle, relative to the battle of Hastings, as "Le sire de Crève-cœur." From him two lines proceeded; one, that of the barons of Redburn, benefactors of the priory of Bollington, was seated in Lincolnshire; the other line, established in Kent, had for its chief,

ROBERT DE CREPITO CORDE, or DE CREVE-CEUR, who, in 1119, founded the priory of Black Canons, at Leeds, in Kent, the manor of which (along with the hundred of Chatham) he inherited from his uncle, Sir Robert Fitz-Hamon. Here, also, during the feud between the king and Odo, Bishop of Baieux, he erected a strong castle, to preserve the district confided to him by John Fynes, constable of Dover and warden of the Cinque Ports. He received, at the same time, many of Haimon Dapifer's possessions, and had his lands erected into a barony, called by distinction, "Baronia de Crèvequer," consisting of five knights' fees. The head of this barony was Chatham, for which reason his descendants generally wrote themselves Dominus de Cetham. By Roysa, his wife, he, dying circ. 1130, left issue,

I. ADAM, who was joined with him in the foundation and endowment of Leedes. (Woever's Funeral Monuments, p. 286.)

II. ELIAS, who made grants to the same establishment; as Dugdale recites. (Monast. Anglie, Vol. vi, pp. 215-218).

III. DANIEL, whom we follow.

DANIEL DE CREVE-ŒUR, confirmed his father's foundation at Leedes, and made further grants. He left a son,

ROBERT DE CREVE-ŒUR, who was also a benefactor to the Priory. His son was

HAIMON DE CREVE-ŒUR, another munificent donor of lands to Leedes. In a deed, printed by Dugdale, he recites the grants made by three generations of his family, viz., "Robertus, pater meus; Daniel, avus meus; et Robertus, alavus meus." He m. circ. 1106, Maud de Abrincis, heiress of the barony of Folkestone, and, with her, received that lordship. Haimon de Creve-œur took part in the Holy Wars; and of his valorous deeds in Palestine, in the crusade under ŒUR DE LION, an interesting account is given in Anecdotes of the Aristocracy, vol. ii. pp. 25, 26. The field of Azotus cost him his three sons, who successively perished while defending the English banner. He returned to his native land on the truce then made with the Seldan; and d. peaceably in 1203, being s. by his grandson,

HAIMON DE CREVE-ŒUR, who was called Sir Hamo del Blen, from his manor of Bleane. He m. circ. 1215, Matilda de Havering. Of his vast landed possessions in Kent and Essex, we have some account in the Calendar of Post Mortem Inquisitions (vol. i. pp. 23, 24). His son,

SIR HAIMON DE CREVE-ŒUR sided with the discontented barons in the reign of HENRY III., and, in 1258, was one of the league, under Simon Montfort, Earl of Leicester, formed against that pusillanimous monarch. His lands were in consequence escheated in 1265, but were (excepting Chatham, the caput baronia) restored some years after. His son was

SIR ROBERT FITZ-HAIMON, who, according to prevailing fashion, converted his patronymic into a surname, and thus led the way to the disease, and, finally, to the extinction of the Norman affix, "de Crève-œur." Undeterred by his father's losses, he became a leader in the revolt against Gaveston, the minion of EDWARD II.; and, during the temporary triumph of that unhappy sovereign, was compelled to surrender his fief of Leedes. He d. circ. 1317; and, in the following year, Leedes Castle was conveyed by the king, in exchange, to Bartholomew, Lord de Badlesmere. The son of Sir Robert was another

SIR ROBERT HAIMON, or HAYMON, whose son,

SIR WILLIAM HAYMON, was father of

SIR PETER HAYMAN, of Tenterden, co. Kent. His son was

ROBERT HAYMAN, Esq. of Tenterden, who founded there a Free Grammar School, for teaching the Latin tongue to so many poor children of Tenterden, as the mayor and jurats (the ex-officio trustees, "having the appointment of the master) should think proper. His son,

PETER HAYMAN, Esq. of Tenterden, was father of

RALPH HAYMAN, or HEYMAN, Esq., who, in the reign of HENRY VII. (1485-1509), possessed considerable estates in Kent. About the year 1490, he purchased of Sir Francis Willoughby the manors of Haringe and Sellinge. He d. circ. 1519, leaving a son,

PETER HAYMAN, or HEYMAN, Esq. of Haringe and Sellinge, who had two sons,

I. ROBERT, whom we follow.

II. PETER, from whom the Somersfield Baronets. (Extinct Baronetage.)

The elder of these,

ROBERT, or ROGER HAYMAN, Esq., m. circ. 1540, Joan, 2nd dau. of Walter Yonge, Esq. of Sudburie, co. Devon. During the Marian persecution in Kent, 1558, he was compelled to flee from his native county, and he found concealment with his wife's relations in Devonshire. Ultimately he settled at or near Exeter; and from him have proceeded different branches, established in the cos. of Devon, Somerset, and Gloucester, springing from his four sons,

I. GEORGE, his heir.

ROBERT HAYMAN, Esq., was b. circ. 1577, at Minehead, where he m. circ. 1599, Elizabeth [Atkin?], and, by her (who d. in 1647), had issue. Mr. Hayman held the commission of captain in the army during the civil war; and two suits of armour, reputed to have been his, were, until lately, preserved at the old family seat, Bye House. He seems to have been occasionally employed in Ireland, and, on the conclusion of hostilities, to have settled there. He was resident at Youghal, co. Cork, 5 Nov. 1651; but appears to have returned to England a year or two afterwards. He d. at Minehead, in 1654, being s. by his eldest son,

HENN OF PARADISE.

HENN, THOMAS-RICE, Esq. of Paradise, co. Clare, barrister-at-law, Q.C., m. Oct. 1845, Jane-Isabella, 2nd dau. of the Right Hon. Francis Blackburne, late Lord Chancellor of Ireland, and now Lord Justice of the Court of Appeal in Chancery in that county, and has,

- I. WILLIAM.
 - II. Francis-Blackburne.
- And other issue.

Lineage.—The family of Henn, one of English origin, has been settled in the county of Clare for nearly two centuries. The name was originally Hene, subsequently Henne, and lastly, about the year 1685, the final e was dropped, leaving the name as it is spelt at the present day. Henry Hene, a distinguished Englishman, was Lord Chief Baron of Ireland in the reigns of CHARLES II. and JAMES II., and a Commissioner of Forfeited Estates for the counties of Clare and Galway. The Lord Chief Baron was descended from an English line as ancient as any of which there are authentic records. The name is to be found in Doomsday Book, vol. i., p. 28. Title subsexe XIII. Terra Willi de Brainsse in BIRBEKE HYND Radulf ten de Wille Hene, and to this family belonged a baronetcy, now extinct, created by JAMES I., anno 1642. Henry Hene, Lord Chief Baron of the Irish Court of Exchequer, is stated to have been nephew to Sir Henry Hene, the 1st baronet, being the son of his elder brother William, who was himself the eldest son of Henry Hene, Esq. of Barking, in Surrey. The history of this baronetcy may be read in BURKE's Extinct Peerage, p. 256. It is sufficient to state here that the 2nd baronet, Sir Henry, spelt his name HENNE, and that in the time of the 3rd and last bart., Sir Richard, the name became what it is at present. Richard Henn, settled at Paradise, anno 1685, having in that year obtained a grant of "Paradise Hill," from the then Earl of Thomond. He m. 6 May, 1701, Mrs. Barbara Lewin, and dying without issue in the year 1717, devised his estates to his brother Thomas, who in 1708, m. Miss Barbara Darby, and had issue by her, Richard, William, Thomas, Mary, Eliza, Anne, and Catherine. Thomas (the father) d. in 1735, and was s. by his son Richard, who m. in 1731, Bridget Hickman, by whom he had issue, Thomas, who d. young; William, who succeeded to his property; Mary, who m. Donagh O'Brien, and Anne, who d. unm. WILLIAM HENN m. Bridget Browne, and had issue by her, 1 RICHARD HENN, who m. Miss Mary Arthur, of Glenomera, 2 William, who m. but d. without issue; 3 Edmund, who m. Miss Gennys (an English heiress of Devonshire, whose name he took, becoming Edmund Henn-Gennys); 4 Thomas, who m. Miss Blakeney, but had no issue; 5 Poole, who m. Miss Pentland, by whom he left issue, William-Poole, and other children; 1 Jane, who m. John Hunt; 2 Eliza, who m. Bolton Waller, Esq. of Shannon Grove, in co. Limerick; and, 3 Anne, m. to — Bambrick, Esq., her first husband, and to — Gubbins, Esq., her 2nd husband. RICHARD HENN, Esq., who m. Miss Arthur, and who on the death of his father, William, s. to the estates, had issue, William, Thomas, and Lucy, who all d. without issue; and he himself dying subsequently, devised the lands of Paradise to his wife Mary, who, in her turn devised them to her own brother, the late THOMAS ARTHUR, Esq. of Glenomera, in the co. of Clare.

This beautiful property, however, after remaining in the possession of Mr. Arthur for about thirty years, has been recently restored to the name of the ancient proprietors, having been repurchased from Mr. Arthur's younger children by THOMAS RICE HENN, Esq., whose descent from the original grantee of the estate is derived as follows:

WILLIAM HENN, 2nd son of Thomas Henn, the brother and devisee of Richard the grantee, was called to the Irish bar, and created a judge of the King's Bench in 1768. In his will which bears date 20 July, 1784, and was proved 9 June, 1796, he names his three daus., Mary, m. to Francis Casly, of Seaford, Esq.; Susanna, m. to William Daxon, of Ennis, Esq.; and Frances, and an only son,

WILLIAM HENN, who became a Master of the Irish Court of Chancery 10 July, 1793, and m. July, 1782, Susanna, sister of the late Sir Jonathan Lovett, Bart., of Lipscombe Park, in Buckinghamshire, by whom he left issue,

- i. WILLIAM, of whom presently.

- ii. Eliza, m. in Jan. 1810, Edward Mayne, Esq. of Stephen's Green.
- iii. Eleanor, d. unm.
- iv. Jane, m. 10 May, 1836, to Walter Hussey Griffith, Esq. of Clare Street, Dublin.
- v. Frances, m. in Jan. 1831, to Stephen Collins, Esq., Q.C., of Merrion Square, Dublin.

The eldest son,

WILLIAM HENN, senior Master in Chancery in Ireland, m. in April, 1809, Mary Rice, eldest dau. of George Fosbery, of Clorane, co. Limerick, Esq., by Christiana his wife, dau. of Thomas Rice, Esq. of Mount Trenchard, in the same co., by whom he has issue: i. William, who d. unm. in 1853; ii. THOMAS-RICE, the present proprietor of the Paradise estate; iii. Jonathan-Lovett; and five daus., i. Christiana; ii. Susanna; iii. Mary, m. to John Stanford, Esq.; iv. Ellen; v. Jane, m. to Robert Holmes, Esq.

The Paradise estate is situate on the River Fergus, at its present junction with the Shannon, and is described by Lloyd, in his survey of the co. Clare, published in the year 1760, as being "one of the most beautiful seats in this kingdom."

It is an interesting fact connected with this distinguished legal family, that Henry Hene, the Lord Chief Baron, a man of known attachment to the Protestant faith, was removed from his high office by King JAMES the 2nd, in order to make way for Mr. Henn's maternal ancestor, Sir Stephen Rice, created Lord Chief Baron, A.D. 1686, upon whom the same sovereign afterwards bestowed the Barony of Mount-eagle. The title of Mounteagle, denied by Parliament to Sir Stephen Rice, has been recently restored, as is well known, in the person of his patriotic and gifted descendant, the present Lord Montague of Brandon.

Lineage.—The name of Herbert (her-ber-ti, illustrious Lord) stands so prominent upon the records of British history, and has been ennobled, at various times, in so many of its branches, and by so many ancient and renewed creations, that it has become a matter of as much interest as difficulty, in the present day, to ascertain the legitimate and chief stem of this long descended family.

Since the merging of the elder branch in the family of Clive, by the marriage of the heiress of the last Herbert, Earl of Powis, with the son of the celebrated General Lord Clive, the chieftainship of the name seems indubitably to rest with Herbert of Muckruss, in the county of Kerry, descended from Thomas Herbert, of Killeugh, who went to Ireland under the care and patronage of his relative Lord Herbert, of Chesham and Castle Island, A.D. 1656; which Thomas was the son of Mathew, the son of Sir John, the son of Sir William, the son of Sir Mathew, of Colebrooke, the lineal descendant from the eldest son of Sir Richard Herbert, of Colebrooke, only brother of the Earl of Pembroke, of the first creation. These brothers, (as may be read in the pages of Speed and Hollinshead), suffered as Yorkists in the wars of the Roses. The heir general of the Earl of Pembroke married into the family of Somerset, Earl and Marquess of Worcester, and Duke of Beaufort. From Sir Richard descended, in the younger branches, the Lords Herbert, of Chesham, after Earls of Powis, and Herbert, Earl of Torrington, both extinct in the male line, while from a senior, but never ennobled branch, the family of Muckruss and Killeugh, now remains the existing and legitimate male representative of this long-descended house.

Lineage.—The family of HEREFORD, one of very great antiquity, derived its surname, according to an old manuscript, from "the name of a city on the borders of the Principality of Wales, formerly very well fortified, and the ordinary residence of the ancient Earls of Hereford."

Contemporaneous with the potent feudal Earls of Hereford, there resided in the city of Hereford, in the time of HENRY II, A.D. 1170, ROGER HEREFORD, "a famous philosopher" (says the same manuscript), who published during the period that Henry of Hereford, and Mabel, his brother, enjoyed the co. of Hereford, the books quoted by John Pitts.

This eminent man flourished about the year 1170, in the reign of the second HENRY, and sixteen years after the death of Roger, EARL OF HEREFORD, one of the brothers of the heiresses who divided the great estates of these earls; so that he seems to have been born at the close of HENRY the First's time. He left at his decease a son,

HENRY DE HEREFORD, of whom there is an entry in the Pipe Roll, in the 8th of JOHN, anno 1201, "that Master

* Her great-grandson, Eustace de Mortain, sold his lands to Robert de Hercy.

Henry of Hereford owes a palfrey, for a fief of the king, to William of Brailouse, for the land of Witton." This appears to have been the first estate in the family. From this Henry descended the eminent Herefordshire family of HEREFORD of Sufton and Mordiford.

SIR HENRY DE HEREFORD, of Sufton and Mordiford, distinguished himself in the Scottish wars, and received the honour of knighthood from King EDWARD III, with a general pardon for all offences committed by him against the State. In 1352, he was present in the parliament held at Westminster, as one of the representatives of the county of Hereford; and the same year he was a second time summoned to the great parliament which was to be held at the same place. HERRICK OF BEAUMANOR.

PERRY-HERRICK, WILLIAM, Esq. of Beaumanor, co. Leicester, J.P. and D.L., b. in 1794; barrister-at-law, M.A. of University College, Oxford, high sheriff of Leicestershire, in 1835.

Lineage.—"There is a tradition," says Dean Swift, "that the most ancient family of the ERRICKS derive their lineage from ERICK, the forester, a great commander, who raised an army to oppose the invasion of WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR, by whom he was vanquished; but afterwards employed to command that Prince's forces, and in his old age retired to his house in Leicestershire, where his family hath continued ever since." Though the earliest ancestor of the family is only recorded by tradition, we learn from ancient writings of unquestionable authority, that the EYRICKS were seated, at a very remote period, at Great Stretton, in Leicestershire, in that respectable line of life, so justly the pride of an Englishman, free tenants of their own lands, two virgates, of which they held under the Abbey of Leicester, on the payment of an annual quit rent to the king of a pound of pepper. These virgates had been given to the abbey by Ralph Friday, Lord of Wiltot, and were successively held by Roger Torr, Sir Ralph Neville, Alan and Henry Eyrick, and Robert Eyrick, the son of Alan.

HENRY EYRICK (the above named) was grandfather of ROBERT EYRICK, of Stretton, who, by Joanna, his wife, had three sons, viz.,

WILLIAM (Sir), his heir.

Robert, known by the name of Robert de Stretton, who entering into holy orders, obtained the degree of LL.D., was appointed chaplain to EDWARD the Black Prince, and was eventually consecrated Bishop of Lichfield. His lordship d. in 1285.

John, of Stretton.

From the eldest son,

SIR WILLIAM EYRICK, Knt. of Stretton, descended,

ROBERT EYRICK, of Houghton-on-the-Hill, living about 1450, who left, by Agnes his wife, two sons, Robert, who d. s. p., and

THOMAS EYRICK, of Houghton, who settled at Leicester, and is the first of the name that appears in the corporation books, where he is mentioned as a member of that body, in 1511. He died about six years after, leaving two sons and a dau. The second son,

JOHN EYRICK, or HEYRICK, of Leicester, b. in 1513, was twice mayor of that corporation, in 1559 and 1572. He m. Mary, dau. of John Bond, Esq. of Warden, in Warwickshire, and by her (who d. 8 Dec. 1611, aged 97) had, with seven daus., five sons, viz.,

ROBERT, thrice mayor of Leicester, and representative of the borough in parliament. He d. in 1618, leaving a numerous family. He is now represented by the Rev. SAMUEL HEYRICK, rector of Brampton, in Northamptonshire.

Nicholas, of London, who m. in 1582, Julian, dau. of William Stone, Esq. of Sogenhoe, in Bedfordshire, and dying in 1592, left issue, 1 William, b. in 1585, d. s. p.; 2 Thomas, b. in 1588, who m. and had issue. He is presumed to have been grandfather of Thomas Heyrick, curate of Harborough, who published some sermons and poems; 3 Nicholas, of London, merchant, living in 1664, aged 75, m. Susanna, dau. of William Salter, and had issue; 4 ROBERT, b. in 1591, in holy orders, a poet of considerable merit; and 5 William, b. in 1593.

Thomas, d. in 1623, s. p.

John, alderman of Leicester, d. in 1613, leaving issue.

WILLIAM (Sir), of whom we treat.

The fifth son,

SIR WILLIAM HEYRICK, M.P. for Leicester, b. about the year 1557, removing to London in 1574, to reside with his brother Nicholas, then an eminent banker in Cheapside, attached himself to the court, and for a considerable time "resided constantly there." He was a man of great abilities and address; remarkably handsome, as appears by a small picture still preserved of him, in his younger days; was high in the confidence of Queen ELIZABETH, as well as of King JAMES, and by honourable service to both, acquired large property. In the reign of the former sovereign he was despatched on an embassy to the Ottoman Porte, and on his return rewarded with a lucrative appointment in the Exchequer. He d. 2 March, 1652-3, having had by his wife, Joan, dau. of Richard May, Esq. of London, and sister of Sir Humphrey May, Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, five daus. and seven sons, I. "1. John a Gaunt, do give and grant unto Richard Hippley,
All the manner herein named, as I tunk in number seven.
To be as firm to be thine, as ever they were mine, from Heaven above to Hell below,
And to confirm the truth, I seal it with my great tooth, the wax in due.

Stone Easton, Camley, Wakam, Tuddhouse, Bracket Charde, Hinton, Bluet."

HODDER OF HODDERSFIELD.

MOORE-HODDER, WILLIAM-HENRY JOHN, Esq. of Hoddersfield, co. Cork, b. 1 Aug. 1846.

Lineage.—It appears, from Hutchins' History of Dorsetshire, that the Hodders were originally of that county, where they held the manor of Longbridy, and other estates. Colonel John Hodder, of Bridgetown, and his brother, William Hodder, of Coolmore, were settlers in the co. of Cork before 1641. The former was some time agent to Sir Philip Perceval. William, as appears from his will, was b. at Milcome (Melcome Regis, in Dorsetshire?) They had a brother, Edward Hodder, whose dau. was living at Weymouth in 1671, and a sister, m. to William Smart. Both of them made large purchases of soldiers' allotments of land, and passed patent for them under the Act of Settlement. John obtained two grants to the extent of 4,133 acres, and William a grant of 7,364 acres, in the co. of Cork, including the seats of the family, viz., Coolmore, Ringabrow or Holdersfield, Ballea, Ringabella, and Fountainstown. John was mayor of the city of Cork in 1656, and high sheriff of the co. of Cork in 1657, and William was mayor in 1657, and high sheriff of the county in 1661. The latter was called before the House of Commons in 1662 for breach of privilege towards a member of the house, being then styled "of Fountainstown," though this might have been his son, of the same name. John m. Jane —, but d. without issue in 1673, leaving his estates to Francis, second son of his brother, William having, however, by deed in his lifetime given Dunkettle and other large estates to his nephew, William Smart.

Family of Binning.

Lineage.—The chief family of this name in Scotland was Binning, of Binning, whose ancestors acquired those lands lying in the county of Linlithgow, and, when surnames became hereditary, assumed the territorial name as a patronymic. The immediate ancestor of whom we have certain information was

WILLIAM BYNNIE, who, in the year 1308, took the castle of Linlithgow from the English, by concealing himself and seven sons in a waggon of hay, which was stopped in the threshold, when the porter and those with him were instantly slain, and a large party of friends, lying in ambush, was admitted, and the garrison put to the sword. The castle was delivered by its captor to King ROBERT BRUCE, who rewarded him with a gift of lands, and assigned to the family, to perpetuate the memory of this hardy adventure, an augmentation of a loaded waggon to their armorial bearings. From William Bynnie lineally descended

CHARLES BINNING, Esq., solicitor-general for Scotland in 1722 (4th son of Sir William Binning, of Wallisford, a great merchant, and provost of Edinburgh); who m. Margaret, dau. of Montgomery, of Broomlands, co. Ayr, by whom he had a son,

JAMES HOOD, and his predecessors, possessed property in the parish of Eymouth in the Merse, in the reigns of JAMES VI and CHARLES I, called by their name, "Hoods-land," part of which, although sold in 1697, is still in the county records under that designation. He survived his younger brother, THOMAS HWDE, b. in 1648, whose name is so spelled on his tombstone in Ayton, where several generations of the family are interred. He left two sons, JOHN and THOMAS. John, the eldest, was b. in 1677, and d. in 1732, leaving also two sons; THOMAS, the younger of the two, b. in 1727, acquired the estate of Stoneridge, and was s. by his elder brother, JOHN, of Stoneridge, b. in 1719, and who d. in 1810, and bequeathed his property to his 3rd cousin, the present JOHN HOOD, Esq. of Stoneridge.

THOMAS HOOD, 2nd son of Thomas Hwde, was b. in 1683, and d. in 1725, leaving, by his wife, Catherine Rutherford, one son, THOMAS HOOD, b. in 1714, who m. Mary Cockburn, dau. of David Cockburn, Esq., of Langton, and d. in 1777, leaving two sons and three daus.

THOMAS HOOD, of Hardacres, co. Berwick, the elder son, was b. in 1749, and d. in 1834. He was a person of singular ability and worth. His opinion and sound judgment as a magistrate and referee, were much respected, and few have ever been more esteemed in the county they lived in. He m. in 1788, his cousin-german, Agnes Cockburn, 3rd dau. of Thomas Cockburn, of Rowchester, by Agnes, his wife, dau. of John Scott, of Belford, co. Roxburgh, and had two sons and two daus. Mr. Hounsfeld, who was of St. John's College, Cambridge, and sometime Chaplain to the troops at Sheffield, and patron of the rectory of Iddesleigh, Devon, d. 12 July, 1859.

Lineage.—The manor of Hounsfeld (now Holmesfield), near Chesterfield, from which this family derives its name, has been held at various times by persons well known in English history. In the Jaq. Post. Mort. 1 Hen. 6, we find that William, son and heir of Sir John Daynecourt, Knt., died seized of the manor of Hounsfeld. In the 33rd of the same reign Margaret, relict of Sir Ralph Cromwell, d. seized (inter alia) of a moiety of the manor of Hounsfeld. The Daynecourts are said (Brit. Mus. Add. MS. 6707, p. 78) to have been possessed of this manor, and that of Elmston as early as the 1st and 27th Edw. III., 1327-1354, and of Hounsfeld alone in 1402-1406. In the time of Elizabeth the manor of Hounsfeld formed part of the considerable possessions of Anthony Babington, of Dethick, Esq., on whose attainder for high treason, it reverted to the crown. The Queen, however, shortly afterwards granted Hounsfeld and other manors to Sir Walter Raleigh. A translation of the grant may be seen in the Add. MSS. 6097, p. 444, where Hounsfeld manor is particularised as forfeited to the crown by Babington, and "late in the tenure or occupation of Roger Fletcher." In the time of the Stuarts, Hounsfeld was held by the ennobled family of Fanshawe, whose house, "Fanshawe gate," is still standing. Subsequently this manor passed to the Burtons, but is now the joint property of the Duke of Rutland, Mr. Greaves, and the Rev. Mr. Boyer. HUGHES OF GWERCLAS.

Barons of Kymmer-yn-Edeirnion.

HUGHES, WILLIAM, Esq., REPRESENTATIVE, in the male line, of the HUGHES'S OF GWERCLAS, BARONS OF KYMMER-YN-EDEIRNION, co. Merioneth, b. 18 April, 1801; m. 11 July, 1835, ELIZA-ANNE, dau. of the late William-Henry Worthington, of Sandiway Bank, co. Chester, Esq., an officer in the Royal Horse-guards (Blue), and d. 14 Dec. 1861, having had issue,

1. WILLIAM-O'FARRELL, b. 18 Feb. 1838, of Emmanuel College, Cambridge.
1. Frances-Elizabeth-Margaretta.

Lineage.—Few families can establish loftier lineage, or deduce descent through more numerous stocks of historic distinction, than the HUGHES'S of Gwerclas, Lords of Kymmer-yn-Edeirnion, and Barons of Bleirion, within the ancient Principality of Powys and Kingdom of Wales.

Derived, by uninterrupted lineal male succession, from OWAIN BROGYNTYN, Lord of Edeirnion, Dinmael, and Abernati in Powys, son of Madoc, last Sovereign Prince of Powys, the existing heir of the Hughes's deduces, through the Baronial Lords of Kymmer, and the Royal Line of Powys, a genealogy of twenty-eight descents, extending over ten centuries, transmitted, in common with the lineage of the monarchs of North Wales and South Wales (the two other Sovereign Dynasties of Cambria), from RHODRI MAWR, renowned in the annals of the Cymri as the Egbert of his race, who, uniting, by inheritance and marriage, the several states of North Wales, South Wales, and Powys, became King of all Wales, A.D. 843.

In 1160, when the Sovereign Diadem, of the Madocian line of Powys, was buried in the tomb of Madoc ap Meredith, and his dominions were apportioned among his children, his chivalrous son, OWAIN BROGYNTYN, became Lord of EDEIRNION, DINMAEL and ABERNATI, in Powys-Padoc, and inherited from his father the Royal Arms of Powys, "Arg., a lion, rampant, sa., armed and langued, gy." ("the black lion of Powys"), which have been transmitted to his descendants. This chief was one of the most distinguished warriors of his age, and took a conspicuous part in the most prominent incidents of a period peculiarly eventful in the annals of Cambria. He made a grant to Basingwerk Abbey of Bala Lake, in Penllyn, which was witnessed by Reiner, Bishop of St. Asaph from 1186 to 1224, and by Ithel, Owain's chaplain. Owain Brogyntyn married Maredd, dau. of Elinon ap Seisyllt, Lord of the Cantref of Merioneth, progenitor of the powerful family of Pugh of Mathavern, in Montgomeryshire, and of the Pryce of Gunley.

It appears by an Inquisition taken 6 HENRY VI., "quod quidam Eignon ap Seysyllt fuit seiscitus in dominio suo ut de feodo de tota terra quam fuit et est inter aquas Dyri, &c. Dewlas tempore Llewelyn ap Iorwerth nuper principis." By this lady the Lord of Edeirnion had three sons, 1. Griffith, living in 1200, who succeeded to Half Edeirnion, ancestor of 1. the Barons of Crogen and Branas, in Edeirnion, represented by the Barons of Kymmer; 2. Barons of Hendwr, in Edeirnion; 3. Bledydd, Lord of Dinmael, living 25 May, 2 HENRY III., 1218, from whom derived, 1 The Barons of Rûg, in Edeirnion; 2 Maesmores of Maesmores, in Dinmael; 3 The House of Plas Isma, in Edeirnion; 4. IORWERTH. The 3rd son,

IORWERTH AP OWAIN BROGYNTYN, inherited half Edeirnion. He m. the Lady Efa, dau. and heir of Prince Madoc, Lord of Mawddwy, in Merionethshire, younger son of Gwenwynwyn, Prince of Powys-Wenwynwyn. By a writ tested at Westminster, 6 Jan., 39 HENRY III., 1244, "Madoc filius Wenuwen," with other "Barones de Norwallia," who performed homage to the King, is ordered to appear before the King at Westminster (Rymer's Fœd. i. 258); and "Madoc filius Wenwynwyn" is party to a treaty of confederation dated 42 HEN. III., 1258 (ib. 370). Iorwerth ap Owain had issue, 1. GRIFFITH AP IORWERTH; 2. ELISAU AP IORWERTH, living 42 HENRY III., 1258, and 23 July, 12

EDWARD I., 1284, whose son, Madoc ap Elisau, living 9 Aug., 17 EDWARD III., 1343, was father of Llewelyn ap Madoc, elected Bishop of St. Asaph, 31 EDWARD III. (Le Neve's Fasti Ecclesiæ Anglicanæ, by Duffus Hardy, i. 68-4) Iorwerth ap Owain Brogyntyn was s. by his eldest son,

GRIFFITH AP IORWERTH, a Baron of Edeirnion, who strenuously co-operated with the Cambrian patriots in asserting the independence of his country against EDWARD I. of England. In 42 HENRY III., 1258, we find him and his brother Elisau, by the designation of "Elisau et Grufud filiorwerth," with their uncle, Griffith Maelor, Lord of Bronsfield, and Madoc ap Gwenwynwyn, Lord of Mawddwy, as also Llewelyn ap Griffith, Prince of Wales, and other "Magnates Wallie," in conjunction with certain "Magnates Scotie," parties to a convention not to make peace with the King of England without mutual consent (Rymer, i. 370). Compelled at length to submission, after the death of Llewelyn ap Griffith, and the conquest of Wales by EDWARD I., Griffith ap Iorwerth accepted a pardon from that monarch, dated at Carnarvon, in the 12th year of his reign, 20 July, 1284 (Rot. Wall. in Tur. Lond., 12 EDWARD I., n. 5), and two days afterwards received from EDWARD a grant to hold his lands "per Baroniam suam antecessoris sui esse teneantur" (ibid.). Griffith ap Iorwerth m. Gwenllian, dau. of David Goch, Lord of Penmachno in Caernarvon, son of Prince David ap Griffith, Lord of Denbigh, who assumed the Welsh throne on the death of his elder brother, Llewelyn ap Griffith, 10 Dec., 8 EDWARD I., 1282. From Lliowarch ap David Goch, brother of Gwenllian, derived the Pughs of Penmachno, represented by the Baroness Le Despencer, and another brother, Griffith ap David Goch, temp. HENRY III., foreman of a jury appointed to take the extent of Wales at Nant Conway, was buried at Bettwa, in Carnarvonshire, where his effigy is to be seen in armour, with the inscription, "Agnes Dei miserece mei." Griffith ap Iorwerth was father of

LLEWELYN DDU AP DAVID, II. Baron of Kymmer-yn-Edeirnion in Llangar, co. Merioneth, who s. his brother, designated "Owennus ap David duos de Kymmer," in a quo warranto of 3 Nov. 8 EDWARD III. (Hart MSS., No. 6068, fo. 12) "Owen ap David ap Griffith and Llewelyn ap David ap Griffith," as "Barones de Edeirnion," performed fealty to Edward the Black Prince as Prince of Wales, 9 Aug., 17 EDWARD III. (Arch. Camb., No. 7, p. 244). "Llewelyn ap David et Owyn ap David fratres eius" were summoned, 24 EDWARD III., to the sessions held at Conway before the Justiciary of North Wales, to answer by what warrant they claim to exercise BARONIAL rights, "APUD TELINGAIR [Llangar] IN TERRIS SUI IN EDEIRNION." (Record of Caernarvon, published by the Record Commissioners, page 183.) Llewelyn Ddu s. Anne, dau. of Ieuan ap Iorwerth, of Llancachellin, in Merionethshire, derived with the Llyodys of Beldrith in Yale, Barts., from Sandde Harid, Lord of Burton, a potent chieftain who flourished towards the end of the 12th century. By this lady, who descended maternally from the De Clare, Earls of Hertford; the De Meschines and Altinas, Earls Palatine of Chester; and the Saxon Algar, Earl of Merch, Baron Llewelyn Ddu was father of IEUAN AP LLEWELYN DDU, III. BARON OF KYMMER-YN-EDEIRNION, who m. Howel ap Meurig was living 15-16 RICHARD II., and he was one of the Jurors in an Inquisition taken at Harlech, 7 HENRY V. From the house of Nanney derived the Vaughans of Nanney, Barts., extinct in 1810. Of the marriage of Rhys ap Ieuan and Angharad there was issue.

1. Griffith ap Rhys, Baron of Crogen and Branas, who d. 4 HENRY VII., ancestor of 1 the Llyodys, Barons of Crogen, HURLY OF CO. KERRY.

HURLY, ROBERT-CONWAY, Esq. of Tralee, co. Kerry, J.P., b. 2 June, 1815; m. 1st, 27 May, 1845, Dorcas, eldest dau. of the late Arthur Blennerhassett, Esq. of Ballyseedy, co. Kerry, and 2ndly, 1860, Annie, eldest dau. of Wm. Collins, Esq. of Whithridge, co. Devon.

Lineage.—The Milesian sept of HURLY, or, more properly speaking, O'HURLY, is descended from a common ancestor with the O'Briens of Thomond, namely, Cas, seventh in descent from OILLOU OLU, King of Munster. O'Flaherty, in his "Ogygia," says, the O'Hurlis are of the Dalcassian race, and of the tribe of Hy Hlod, who possessed the territory called Trichia Hy Hlod, which comprised a great part of the baronies of Lower Ormond and Owey, in Tipperary.

The O'Hurlis were at one time one of the most powerful and widely-disseminated families in Munster, as is attested by the numberless ruins which still remain of fortresses and religious edifices erected by them in former times throughout the counties of Limerick, Clare, Cork, and Tipperary; but, included in Desmond's attainder, and faithful to the house of Stuart, even in its despair, they were ruined by their fidelity, and the vast and ancient estates of the various members of the family having been wrested from them by a succession of confiscations, and they themselves scattered, only one branch which diverged from the parent stock, and settled, several generations back, in Kerry, now remains to represent this once powerful sept. Druid Dabhair, in the county of Limerick, now Knocknong, where the family is placed by Orielus in his map of Ireland, was the principal residence of the chief. He was designated chief of Brennan Bawn, the clan being called after their progenitor, Brennan the fair, brother to Fionn, the ancestor of the O'Briens, and both sons of Cas. At Knocknong are still to be seen the ruins of a castle of considerable strength. Camden, in his "Britannia," says, "Of great note and name above the rest in this tract, Limerick, besides the Bourkes and Fitzgeralds, are the De Lacey and Brownes of English, also the O'Briens, O'Hurlis, and Macmahons, of Irish breed." According to Brodun's "History of Ireland," the illustrious families of the county of Limerick were O'Brien, O'Hurley, De Burgo, and the house of Desmond.

THOMAS HURLY, of Knocknong, represented the borough of Kilmallock in 1585, and during the greater part of ELIZABETH's reign, and was succeeded by his son.

Lord Dunboyne, and Ellinor m. David Barry Rathanskic. He was succeeded by his eldest son.

SIR MAURICE HURLY, who, by his wife, Catherine, the dau. of O'Dyer, had two sons, William and John, and one dau., Lettice. He forfeited his great and ancient estates in Limerick in 1641, and being removed by CROMWELL, according to a favourite expression of his, to Connaught, or to hell, to the county of Galway, he d. at his mansion of Doone in 1683, and was succeeded by his eldest son.

SIR WILLIAM HURLY, Bart., who represented the borough of Kilmallock in 1689, and being zealously attached to the interests of King James II, he forfeited the estates granted to his father in Galway by CROMWELL. He m. Mary, dau. of Colonel Blount, and by her had one son.

SIR JOHN HURLY, Bart., who, whilst a minor, by Bryan Mac O'Brien, his guardian, as son and heir of Sir Wm. Hurlly, Bart. had claim to the estate of Melmalleg, Shanballytine, and Corlick, in fee tail special after the death of claimant's mother, Dame Mary O'Brien, alias Hurlly, in virtue of marriage articles dated 19 June, 1682, and witnessed by James, Lord Dunboyne, Thomas Butler, and John Hurlly (1st of Claims as they were entered with the trustees at Chichester House, in Dublin, on or before August 10th, A.D. 1700—No. 931). This claim was not allowed, and Sir John Hurlly was arrested in Dublin about the year 1714, for raising men for the Pretender, but made his escape to France and was never more heard of.

JOHN HURLY, 2nd son of Sir Thomas, had issue, John, the father of Colonel John Hurlly, and three daus. Grace Hurlly, eldest dau., m. Capt. John Purton, of Tallagh, co. Huysh of Nottingham.

In this family there is a tradition that its ancestor, having joined in Monmouth's rebellion, fled after the battle of Sedgemoor; and to escape the persecution of Judge Jeffreys, quitted altogether his native place, Taunton, and settled at Leicester. The arms of Huysh and Avenell* have been borne quarterly by this family, and they possess a Bible of the date 1676, with the name "Eliakim Huysh, Taunton, Somersetshire," on the binding. These traditions, coupled with the coincidence of the rather uncommon Christian name of Mark recurring with that of Robert at that precise period, afford the strongest grounds for believing this to be the truth, although no direct evidence exists of the fact.

MARK HUYSH, of St. James's, Taunton, and who was a direct descendant of Richard Huysh, of New Inn (for whom see before), whose will was proved in 1651, had issue, Robert and Mark, the latter baptized 14 Nov. 1639. Robert was father of Mark, baptized 18 June, 1654, and Robert, baptized in 1659.

Lineage.—The Irvines of Castle Irvine—a family of the highest distinction in Ireland since their first settlement in that kingdom—are of very ancient Scottish ancestry, whose descendant,

CHRISTOPHER IRVINE, Laird of Bonshaw, was slain with King JAMES IV. at the battle of Flodden, 9 Sept. 1513, where he commanded the king's light horse against the English. He was succeeded by his son,

CHRISTOPHER IRVINE, Laird of Bonshaw, the father of CHRISTOPHER IRVINE, Laird of Bonshaw, who commanded the light horse under King JAMES V. at the battle of Sulist Moss, in December, 1542, where he was slain. He left issue two sons,

1. EDWARD, Laird of Bonshaw, whose elder son, Christopher Irvine, continued the main line, and whose younger son, Edward Irvine, became Laird of Stapleton; m. He commanded a party of borderers on behalf of Queen MARY of Scotland, and did great and signal service first to her and then to her son, King JAMES VI. who condescended to be his guest, and held him in great esteem. He left a son and successor,

JOHN IRVINE, Laird of Bobbhill and Annan, who d. young, having m. CHRISTOPHER IRVINE, a lawyer, bred at the Temple, London. He was the first of the family who settled in Ireland upon a grant from King JAMES VI. of Scotland and I. of England of lands in the county of Fermanagh. He built Castle Irvine, which was burnt by the rebels in 1641, and he and his family narrowly escaped being murdered by them. He lived till after the Restoration, and d. at an advanced age. Lineage.—The name of Irwin, Irwyn, or Irvine, appears to have been of long standing in the south and south-west of Scotland.

A member of the family of Irwin early acquired the lands of Bonshaw, in Dumfriesshire, which his descendants still possess; and when ROBERT BRUCE took the field against EDWARD I. for the crown of Scotland, he appointed

WILLIAM DE IRWIN of that line (but whether its chief or not has not been ascertained) his armour-bearer, gave him his own device of arms, when Earl of Carrick, viz., "three holly-leaves," and made him a grant, by charter under the great seal, of the forest of Drum, or Drumm, in Aberdeenshire. Thus originated the great house of IRVINE OF DRUM, so highly allied, and so conspicuous in the family records of Scotland. Tradition tells of a bloody feud that broke out between the Irvines and the Keiths, hereditary grand-marshals of Scotland; and of a battle fought upon a moor on the north side of the Dee, which, in consequence, is still called "the Keiths' Muir." The Irvines defeated their enemies and drove them across the river.

ALEXANDER IRVINE, of Drum, grandson of the grantee, was a commander of the lowland forces at the battle of Harlow, anno 1411, where he was killed. Alexander Irvine was s. by his brother,

ALEXANDER IRVINE, of Drum, who changed his Christian name upon inheriting, a precedent for which alteration being established by King ROBERT III., whose baptismal name had been JOHN. This laird of Drum was one of the commissioners deputed by the states of Scotland to treat concerning the ransom of JAMES I., and was knighted by that monarch in 1454. He m. Elizabeth, dau. of Sir Robert Keith, great-marshal of Scotland and had two sons; the elder was ALEXANDER, his heir; and the younger, to whom lands of Whiteriggs and Rodmires, and whō had a charter from the Earl of Huntly of the lands of Beltie, distinguished himself at the battle of Brechin, in 1452, under that nobleman, against the Earl of Crawford. From this gallant person descend the Irvines of Lanark, and the Irvines in Germany. The elder son,

* The ancient family of SHALLERROSS, of Shalleross, is believed to be extinct, the above named John Shalleross, who was sheriff of the co. in 1696, and d. in 1733, having been the last heir male. Six generations of this family are described in the Visitation of 1611 (see Lynce's Derbyshire). A MS. pedigree traces the family back to a peer of antecedent to the 23rd EDWARD I (a. d. 1254). The first ancestor therein named is Sussie de Shalleross. To "Richard de Schalleross, seigneur de Suanli," an inheritance in Femeilgh was conveyed in 1204. Two other deeds in the margin of the pedigree relate to lands in Tacyral or Taxal. These estates appear to have remained in the family to the end of its existence. The MS. records intermarriages with the family of Beresford, of Bentley (thus forming a double connection with the Jacksons), Jodrell, of Cheshire, Bagshawe, of the Ridge, co. Derby, Davenport, Cressay, Hironson, Rowley, of Rowley, co. Salop, Arderne, of Harden, Fitzherbert, of Somersall, and others of distinction. Col. This very old branch of the ancient family of Fitzherbert thus became extinct. The family traces its descent from the chamberlain of HENRY I, about 1120, a very early descendant of whom, William, the father of Sir William Fitzherbert, lord of Nurbury, "to whom HENRY III granted free warren in Nurbury, a. d. 1252, and who had three sons, viz., Henry, his heir; Thomas, lord of Somersall, ancestor of the FITZHERBERTS of Tisington, co. JOHN DE JOHNSTONE his son was one of the Barons who swore fealty to EDWARD I., in 1296. His great grandson, SIR JOHN DE JOHNSTONE was a man of great eminence in the reign of ROBERT II., and was Warden of the West Marches in 1378. His grandson, SIR ADAM JOHNSTONE, of Johnstone, was a distinguished commander under the Earl of Douglas, at the battle of Sark, in 1448. The JOHNSTONES of Westerhall, are descended from MATTHEW JOHNSTONE, son of Sir Adam Johnstone, who d. 1455, by his 2nd wife, Lady Janet Dunbar, dau. of George, 10th Earl of March, and widow of Lord Seton. From Sir Adam's son, by his first marriage, descended the MARQUESSES OF ANNANDALE.

On the death of George, 3rd Marquess of Annandale, in 1792, the Baronet of Westerhall became head of the family of Johnstone, and claimant of the dormant marquessate. This claim is still before the House of Lords.

George, who carried on the line of the family, and was father of SIR JOHN, 6th baronet.

* The maternal descent of the Johnstones of Westerhall was much more illustrious than that of the Johnstones of Johnstone. Their ancestress, Lady Janet Dunbar, was immediately descended from the blood royal of Scotland. JOHNSTONE OF GALABANK.

JOHNSTONE, EDWARD, Esq., barrister-at-law, the Inner Temple, b. 9 April, 1804.

Lineage.—JOHN JOHNSTONE, of Mylnfield, had with his ancestors, the Johnstones of Newby, enjoyed the barony of Mylnfield, which he held, probably, from the Barons Johnstone, under whose family he served in the military expeditions to which they were frequently called out in those hostile times. King JAMES was hardly seated on the throne of England, when the Laird of Mylnfield felt the rod of oppression, which was then heavily laid upon the necks of the vassals to the Scots lords. He was called upon to produce the writings by which he held his lands; he gave the same answer which the Scots barons had formerly given to ROBERT BRUCE, when the King for better reasons made the same demand. John of Mylnfield answered, he held them by his sword; but that title having now lost its usual value and importance, he was compelled to surrender his lands to the Lord Johnstone, his chief and superior. Agnes, a sister of John, was m. to Charles Murray, whose younger brother, Sir James Murray, of Cockpool, was made Earl of Annandale, by patent, dated at Whitehall, 13 March, 1624. In 1625, John Johnstone purchased of John Galloway, in Annan, the lands of Galabank. His son and successor,

GEORGE JOHNSTONE, m. Agnes Graham, of Dumfriesshire, and had a very considerable sum of money settled upon him, which shews that John of Mylnfield was for the times a man of opulence. His only son, JOHN JOHNSTONE, of Galabank, m. in 1676, Janet, dau. of Thomas Kirkpatrick, of Auldgrith, and had issue, John of Galabank, whose only dau. and heiress, Janet, m. to — Beatty, of Milliea.
